THE MORRIS 8

2-door 8 (Fixed Head) £175

4-door 8 (Fixed Head) £199 10.
(Bumpers Extra £2 10.)

4-door 8 (Sliding Head) £215 (Bumpers Included)

Ample power—acceleration—perfect braking and steering under all road conditions and a standard of safety never equalled before in a light car—these are the considered claims of the makers. We ask you to drive one of these not so little wizards, note the interior, its size, big as the ordinary ten, its deep comfort-cushioned upholstery and how well the upholsterers have done their work. Note the body work too, how effectively the Body Builders have done their job, slick fitting doors, no signs of gaping or roughness anywhere. In noting all this, remember the cars' performance—top speed around the sixty mark, petrol consumption 45 miles per gallon. £8 Road Tax, and years of trouble-free Morris motoring—remember too its' second-hand value. Just try to buy a second-hand Morris 8, and if you can you'll find how small its' depreciation is—the other fellow has a car he's proud to own—the Morris 8.

THE NEW MORRIS 8 SPORTS TOURING MODEL is now available. Price £185.

The TEN and TWELVE

Twelve £270

Ten £265

Successors to the "Cowley." These models maintain the high standard of reliability and good value that made the Cowley world-famous. An extremely efficient 4 cylinder power unit (floating) gives a really economical road performance. They are generously roomy, fast and safe, and for the owner who has to cover long distances, day in day out, in comfort and with an eye to expense, we know no car so suitable. The equipment includes "Jackhall" hydraulic jacks, hydraulic shock absorbers, Lockheed hydraulic brakes, Bishop Cam Steering, reinforced coach built bodies, Full five lamp equipment, draught-free ventilation, built-in luggage accommodation.

FOURTEEN/SIX

This new model has been specially designed for the motorist who requires an extremely comfortable car with a high cruising speed, vivid acceleration and all the refinements associated with a quality car. It has a cruising speed of over 60 m.p.h. Its' acceleration is breath-taking, cornering is fast and safe. It will dawdle in traffic and flash out on the get-away in a manner that has to be experienced to be believed. Its' interior finish is carried out in fine soft hide, deep cushioned for comfort, is beautiful, and the running costs are very low indeed. It incorporates 'completely controlled' draughtless ventilation, hydraulic built-in jacks, Lockheed hydraulic brakes, Triplex glass and many other features exclusive to Morris.

THE BIG SIXES

Eighteen/Six £355. Twentyfive/Six £375.

The Supreme Achievement of Specialisation is the Morris Big Six range—(18 H.P. and 25 H.P.)—they stand alone in the field of quality cars marketed at reasonable prices. Straightforward in design and entirely devoid of untried "selling points," the new Morris Sixes possess every attractive feature that could be desired by the most fastidious owner. Essentially modern they incorporate such features as permanent built-in hydraulic jacks, concealed luggage accommodation, fume-consuming air cleaner and silencer, hydraulic shock absorbers—engines of advanced design. Cross braced frame (box type), draughtless ventilation, pneumatic squab cushions, etc. Their road performance leaves nothing to be desired—speed and acceleration being sparkling.

Here is a range of cars designed to meet the requirements of a motoring public that is exacting in the matters of quality, performance, horse power and price.

Whilst the models vary in horse power and price from the "Twenty-five" at £375 to the "Eight" at £175—the following characteristics are uniform throughout the range. Each Morris is specialisation built and excess tested and in no case has any economy been effected that would take away from the comfort, appearance or performance of the car.

These models have swept the board for sales in Great Britain and Ireland. In twelve months actually over 100,000 motorists selected Morris as being their car. This in itself should convince that the value, performance and reliability of Morris Cars are unrivalled.

G. A. Brittain Ltd. who build Morris Cars at their Portobello Works (the finest in Dublin) are particularly proud of the body work which is confidently claimed to be the finest in the Irish Free State and the equal of any produced in Great Britain.

SPECIALISATION

Specialisation is the Morris reply to mass production. Its advantages are that whilst it does effectively lower the price of a model to compete with mass production, it definitely does not lower the standard of craftsmanship which is built into the car. Every part whether it be a gearbox or a steering box has the finish and quality you would only get in a high-priced car, or in a special racing job. Think what this means in years of safe and cost-free motoring. To achieve Specialisation meant the equipping and staffing of 15 huge factories, but the results have more than justified the effort, and to-day Morris Motors Ltd. and Morris owners alike are enjoying the triumph of a production that is everything that could reasonably be expected or wished for—even then Morris Motors Ltd. did not stop and say 'that's good enough'—they introduced the system of EXCESS-TESTING and when you buy your Morris now, you have the satisfaction of knowing that not only have you a precision engineering job, but in-built into every car is a safety margin of of 50%.

EXCESS-TESTING

Testing that reveals the worth of a car far more emphatically than road tests alone can possibly do. By scientific methods five years' wear is condensed into one month—gears are continually operated far beyond their normal life—the chassis subjected to incredible strains—fabrics ten years faded in two days—carpets six years foot-worn in as many days—every feature of the car is tested to absolute finality. EXCESS-TESTING means, that when you buy a Morris, you buy a car that has been tested beyond all the claims made for it, and beyond all normal usage.

DUBLIN CIRCUIT COURT

CLAIM FOR WAGES

DECREE FOR PLAINTIFF

(BEFORE JUDGE DAVITT.)

Nathan Levy, 100 Kenilworth Park, Harold's Cross, sued Samuel Brown, mantle and costume manufacturer, Temple lane, Dublin, for £84, being twelve weeks salary, alleged to be due to him, following his wrongful dismissal by the defendant.

The plaintiff's case was that on December 12 last year he was engaged by the defendant as foreman tailor at £6 a week, and that on January 15th following he was appointed manager at the same salary, with 36 to 40 workers under him. On February 15 last he asked for an increase of £2, and Mr. Brown gave him £1 advance. On April 25 following the defendant, after a brief interview, gave him two weeks' pay and discharged him. It was the custom in the trade to give a man in his position twelve weeks' notice. They turned out about 260 women's coats and about 200 women's skirts every week.

Mr. Robert Gould, wholesale clothier, South Great George's street, stated that it was customary in the trade to give a manager two to three months' notice. At present there were about twenty such managers in the Free State.

Mr. Brown, the defendant, stated that he was managing director of the firm C. M. T. Mantles, Ltd., Temple lane. He produced the wages books which showed the plaintiff's name during the period of his employment.

The Judge, having examined the books, drew the attention of the witness to them, and said: "I must warn you to be very careful. It is obvious that something has been erased from this book, and modern methods are very well developed for discovering fakes of any kind."

The witness stated that he had engaged the plaintiff as a tailor, and that there was nothing specific said between them as to notice. The plaintiff was never manager of the concern. There could not be two managers of the concern. As to the reason for plaintiff's dismissal, the witness said that he had not been giving entire satisfaction, as he was not able to keep up the output of garments. The plaintiff was employed by the C.M.T. Mantle Company.

To the Judge, the witness said that he carried on the same kind of business there before the C.M.T. Company was formed.

In answer to Mr. O'Dell, the witness said that he generally paid on behalf of the C.M.T. Mantle Company, but he did not consider himself liable for the wages of the plaintiff.

Miss Sarah Brown, daughter of the defendant, said that she kept the wages books, and paid the plaintiff at the same time as the other employés were paid. She added that it was she who rubbed out the name of Brown on the books, and wrote in C.M.T. Mantles, Ltd.

Maurice Rosenberg, who had been a foreman tailor and had been employed by the defendant in this case, said that a week's notice was customary in the trade.

The Judge gave the plaintiff a decree for £56 and costs.

Mr. T. M. O'Dell (instructed by Messrs. Findlater and Co.) appeared for the plaintiff.

Mr. J. Devlin (instructed by Mr. Victor Elyan) appeared for the defendant.

BOYLE MURDER TRIAL DRAMA

CONCLUSION OF EVIDENCE

CROSS-EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES

JUDGE WILL SUM UP TO-DAY

THE hearing of the evidence was concluded yesterday of the case in which Thomas Kelly, a middle-aged man, was charged with the murder of Patrick Henry (67), in the house where they both had resided at Great Meadow, Boyle, Co. Roscommon, on or about the 11th September, 1935.

Mr. Martin Maguire, K.C., with Mr. Kevin Haugh (instructed by the Chief State Solicitor) prosecuted; and Mr. Brereton Barry, K.C., with Mr. R. S. Hogan (instructed by Mr. C. E. Callan) was assigned for the defence.

The case for the defence was continued.

William Johnson, chief clerk of the Bank of Ireland College Green, Dublin, was examined about certain banking transactions which Kelly had with the bank. He said that in December, 1931, Kelly opened an account with a draft from the National City Bank, New York, for the sum of £796. He gave his address then as the Globe Hotel, Dublin.

Mr. Charles J. Joyce, solicitor, said that Kelly called at his office in June, 1933, in connection with the purchase of a house on the North Strand. The cost of the house was £775, on which he paid a deposit of £232, including auctioneer's fees. Kelly never completed the purchase of the house, and his deposit was forfeited. Several letters had been sent to him to come in and complete the deal, but they were unanswered. Later an advertisement was inserted in the Agony Columns of two Dublin newspapers. Kelly turned up two days later and said that he had not seen the advertisements. He promised to complete the sale, but he never came back.

Miss Josephine Fallon, Mohill, gave evidence that during the year 1933 the accused man lodged in her house in the name of Flynn.

Asked by Mr. Maguire if she noticed any change in the appearance of the accused man since she saw him, she said that when she saw him he was clean shaven. He could have worn glasses, but she had never seen them on him.

Mr. Maguire—You know his wife?—Yes. Would you describe her as an agreeable, respectable, decent woman?—As far as I know I think she should be.

Do you know her as a person easy to get on with?—I don't know. I never lived with her.

John Cunningham, High street, Boyle, gave evidence that the accused man stayed in his house from September, 1934, till February, 1935.

Mrs. M. K. Armstrong and Laurence MacDermott, employés at St. Vincent's Laundry, Boyle, gave evidence about the accused man, Kelly, inquiring for parcels for him in the name of Thomas Mooney.

MARRIAGE

Miss C. M. McKeown, Longford, gave evidence to the effect that the accused man came to Longford in 1932, and got married in July, 1933. He left his wife on August 15th. Some time later she heard that he was staying in Mohill, and she went to see him, and he returned to his wife and stayed for three or four weeks. He was always known to her as Kelly.

James K. Kealy, Boyle, said that the accused man, Kelly, used to visit his licensed premises some times two or three times a day. Two or three times a week he might come in before 11 a.m., and have a glass of whiskey. During the day he might have a pint of stout. Kelly was spending a fair amount of money in his public-house, and witness knew he was drawing Unemployment Assistance money, and he often wondered how Kelly could be spending the money.

Mr. B. W. McCarronn, Station Master, Boyle, said that the first train left Boyle at 6.30 in the morning, and there was no record of any ticket having been issued to any person for that train on the 12th September, 1935.

Miss Kathleen MacPherson, Boyle, said that she knew the accused man, Kelly, by appearance, but not to speak to. She also had known Patrick Henry. She exhibited a piece of crochet at Boyle Show on the 12th September, 1935. She was with her sister, Mary, when she met her brother, Paul, and the three of them went to see the exhibits. She saw Patrick Henry at the show. She had no doubt about seeing him there. He was standing near the exhibits, and she passed near to him.

Cross-examined by Mr. Maguire, witness said that she was twenty-three years of age, and had been making crochet, or lace, for seven or eight years. She was also exhibiting a cake at the Boyle Show. She had been going to the Boyle Show for five or six years.

Mr. Maguire—Might this time you saw Henry have happened the year before?—It could have, but I don't think it did.

Do you recognise Superintendent Twomey as the man who interviewed you?—I can't remember.

Is your recollection of people so bad that you cannot recognise Superintendent Twomey as the man you were talking to in December last?—No, I don't remember.

How long was he talking to you?—About two or three minutes.

Did Superintendent Twomey ask you when you had last seen Henry?—Yes.

Did he ask you when you had last seen Kelly?—I cannot remember that

Did you tell Superintendent Twomey that you could not say when you had last seen Henry?—I cannot remember.

Might you have said it?—It is quite possible.

That was in December of last year?—Yes.

It was after the murder had been discovered?—Yes.

Everybody in Boyle was talking about the murder?—Yes.

All the people were raking their minds to know when the men disappeared and when they were last seen?—Yes.

And it was an important matter?—Yes.

And you might have told Superintendent Twomey at that time that you did not know when you had last seen Henry?—It is quite possible.

The Superintendent did not write anything down?—Not in my presence.

I suggest to you that the reason he did not write anything down was that he could get nothing of any importance from you?—Yes.

You never at any time told the Guards that you saw Henry on September 12?—No.

In further reply witness said that she knew Guard Hawkshaw, Detective-Officer Doyle and other Guards.

Mr. Maguire—Can you explain why it is that you never told the story to a single one of the Guards?—I was not asked about it.

Were you asked by Superintendent Twomey?—I cannot remember our conversation.

Have you been talking over the evidence you would give in this case with your brother and sister?—Yes.

How often?—Three or four times.

AT THE SHOW

In a further reply witness said that some time after she heard the rumour that he was missing she remembered seing Henry at Boyle Show.

Was it before or after talking to the Superintendent?—After.

Who did you first say it to?—My sister.

Have you, your brother and sister agreed to tell the same story?—Yes.

Why didn't you tell the Guards bout it?—They did not ask me.

Did anybody ask you to tell the story?—Yes.

Who asked you?—Mr. Callan.

Did anybody speak to you before that?—No reply.

Did a man called Mullen ask you to tell this story?—Not that I remember.

Do you know a man called Mullen?—Yes.

Did he speak to you about it?—Yes.

When did he first speak to you about it?—I don't know.

Did he ask you to say that you had seen Henry on the show day?—No.

In further reply she said that Mullen did not call to her house; they met on the street.

How often has Mullen spoken to you since?—Every day.

Does he speak to your brother and sister?—Yes.

What is his occupation?—He has no occupation; he is an ex-R.I.C. man.

Was he the first person to ask you had you seen Henry on the show day?—No, he was not.

Who was the first person to ask you?—It was my brother.

Re-examined by Mr. Hogan, the witness said that Mullen was their next door neighbour and they spoke to him every day. On the day of the show she was going with her brother to the place at the show where the exhibits were, when she saw Henry. That fixed it in her mind what show it was.

Mr. Justice O'Byrne—The first person who spoke to you about this was the superintendent?—Yes.

And that was after the discovery of the body?—Yes.

And when the superintendent asked you, you said you did not know, or something to that effect?—I think so.

Have you any distinct recollection of what you told the superintendent?—No, sir.

Might you have told him that you did not remember when you last saw him?—Yes.

The witness, in further reply to Mr. Justice O'Byrne, said that it was some months after the discovery of the body that she remembered seeing Henry at the Show. It did occur to her at the time that this was an important matter, but it did not occur to her to convey that information to the Guards.

SAW HENRY

Paul MacPherson, brother of the last witness, said that he was at the Boyle Show, accompanied by his two sisters. While he was on his way to where his sister was exhibiting he saw Patrick Henry, and there was no doubt whatever he saw him as he was passing towards the exhibits.

Cross-examined by Mr. Haugh, witness said that he could not by any chance be referring to the Show of 1934.

In further cross-examination, he said that it was after the verdict at the inquest that Henry had been murdered that he remembered he had seen Henry at the Boyle Show. He said he had conversations with his sisters about the matter, and when he mentioned that he had seen Henry they remembered also having seen him.

In reply to Mr. Haugh, witness said that Mr. Mullen had never spoken to him about giving evidence, but had spoken to him about the murder.

You appreciate that if Kelly was on his way to Belfast and Henry was alive and well at the Boyle Show, that it was a matter of vital importance?—I am here to say that I saw him on the 12th. It is for me to tell the truth and all I know about it, and tell what I saw with my own eyes.

When did you first realise that it was in the accused man's favour what you saw?—After depositions were taken in Boyle.

Witness added that when he saw the account of the District Court proceedings in the Press he knew that Kelly could not have committed the murder on the 10th September when he had seen Henry alive on the 12th.

Asked why he did not tell the Guards in Boyle, witness said that he had never been asked. He told several people about seeing Henry at the Boyle Show. He met Mr. Callan one day accidentally and told him about it. He also told Mr. Callan that his sisters were with him at the time. Mullen had never talked to him about the matter. When he talked the matter over with his sisters they did not agree to tell the same story. He was just telling now what he thought was true.

Mr. Haugh—Have you ever had trouble with the Guards?—I had.

Was that in 1928?—Yes; some time about then.

Was that a charge of embezzling your employer's money?—Yes. It was alleged.

Asked whether he was convicted on that charge, witness said that he had told his employer he lost the money, and he agreed to pay it back.

In reply to Mr. Brereton Barry, witness said that the amount involved was £1 18s. 3d. His story in the Court was perfectly true, and he repaid the money and was not punished in any way.

Mr. George Johnson, Boyle, said that he knew Henry, who had stopped in their house, roughly, from the month of April to November, 1934, and afterwards used to come and visit them. He knew Kelly by appearance.

Mr. Hogan—Can you recollect when you last saw Henry?—On the morning of the Show.

At about what time?—Roughly, about nine o'clock.

Where was he when you saw him?—He was standing against the Workhouse railings. Have you any doubt in your mind that you saw him that morning?—No.

Mr. Maguire (cross-examining)—He was near the Labour Exchange?—Yes.

Well, then, it would have been no trouble for him to have walked into it. You have heard the evidence that there were six shillings waiting for him, and he had only to go in and take it?—Yes.

Well, how can you explain that?—I am not explaining it.

Had you ever seen Henry out at that hour before?—No, sir; I had not.

So it must have struck you as something peculiar that morning?—Yes.

THE INQUEST

You heard at the inquest a verdict of murder against some person or persons unknown?—Yes.

Well then you knew the importance of your seeing Henry that morning? (There was no reply.)

Did the police come to your house to make inquiries?—Yes

Did you see them there?—Yes.

Witness said that was in or around Christmas last year—after the inquest. He did not know that at that time the police were making inquiries about Henry. He knew they were making inquiries about Kelly. He was not asked to make any statement.

Mr. Maguire—How did you come to say you saw Henry on the morning of the show?—They were asking me questions, and I replied that the last time I had seen any of the men was on the morning of the show, and I mentioned Henry.

Witness said that in October last he was asked by Mr. Callan, solicitor, if he had seen Henry at the show.

Mr. Maguire—What was Henry doing that morning when you saw him?—He was out looking at the exhibits being driven up to the show and the prize cattle.

Do you know Mullen?—Yes.

Has he ever talked to you about this case?—No, never.

What is Mullen's occupation?—He is an ex-R.I.C. man, and has a bit of land.

Has he ever asked you to give evidence in this case?—No.

Did anybody ask you to give evidence?—No.

So that you volunteered to give all this evidence yourself?—Yes.

Bernard Doherty, an old age pensioner, said that he last saw Patrick Henry on the morning of the show between 10 and 11 a.m. He was standing at the workhouse railings. Witness bade him "Good morning" and asked him if he was going to the show, and he said he did not know. Witness went on. He had no doubt of having seen Henry.

Mr. Maguire (cross-examining)—You say you saw him between 10 and 11?—Yes.

ALLEGED STATEMENT

Do you remember seeing Thomas Kelly there?—I thought I did—standing a few yards away.

Did you say in your statement to the Guards on January 31 last: "I remember September 12, 1935, the day of the show. I saw Patrick Henry on the footpath near Neilan's corner and Kelly was standing about five yards away?—Yes.

Did you say then that it was between 12 noon and 1 p.m.?—No; I did not

Mr. Maguire produced the statement and asked the witness if it was his. He said it was and that it was read over to him and he signed it.

Mr. Maguire—You said in that it was between 12 and 1 p.m.?—I never said that. I did not mention 12 and 1 p.m.

Mr. Maguire quoted another extract from the statement in which the witness is given as saying: "I am sure it was September 12. I saw Henry and Kelly standing at Neilan's corner. The reason I remember it is that I was at Boyle Show early that morning and came home to dinner, and was going back again when I asked Henry if he was coming."

Witness—No. It was when I was going to the show that morning that I saw Henry. It is wrong in the statement.

In further reply to Mr. Maguire, the witness said that he was at the show all day. He did not see Henry there.

Re-examined by Mr. Hogan, the witness said that he did not see the face of the man he thought was Kelly.

Mary MacPherson said that when going to look at the exhibits at the show with her brother and sister she saw Henry standing in the field. She had no doubt about seeing him.

Cross-examined by Mr. Haugh, the witness said that she could not tell any of the other persons she saw there. They were strangers to her.

Mr. Haugh—Can you tell us any local person you saw?—I could not tell.

You are living all your life in Boyle?—Yes.

When did you first have this man brought to your memory?—On or about December 13, when I heard he was dead.

Witness said that it was not at the 1934 Show that she saw Henry.

This concluded the case for the defence.

WITNESS RECALLED

Mr. Justice O'Byrne recalled Michael Tansey, and asked him if he remembered the occasion he carried a bag to Henry's house. Witness said he did. He was accompanied by Kelly, who stopped a while talking to Henry, whom they met. Witness went on.

So far as you are aware, Henry may have given a key to Kelly?—He may have, unknown to me.

Mary Kate Brennan was also recalled, and, in reply to the Judge, said that on the morning of the 11th September the fire in Henry's house was lighted a bit earlier than usual. The usual hour for lighting the fire was between eight and nine o'clock. On that morning it was lighted between seven and seven-thirty. She said that the milkman called between seven and eight in the evening and attempted to deliver milk. There might have been a padlock on the door then.

Mr. R. S. Hogan, for the defence, and Mr. Kevin Haugh, for the prosecution, addressed the jury, and the Court adjourned until this morning, when the Judge will sum up.

A CHEQUE FOR £5,000

"SWEET AFTON" WINNER

The Lord Mayor of Dublin, at the Theatre Royal last night, presented on behalf of Messrs. P. J. Carroll and Co., the manufacturers of "Sweet Afton" cigarettes, a cheque for £5,000 to the representative of Mr. H. C. Hoey, Tullamore, who drew Laureat II.

Mr. Hoey did not appear on the stage in person, and the cheque was received by Mr. Telford, manager of the National Bank in Dundalk. The horse, Laureat II., came in third in the Cambridgeshire, and the prize, therefore, amounted to £10,000. Mr. Hoey held a half-share in the Hospitals' Trust ticket, which he received for "Sweet Afton" coupons, the other half being held by Miss Rose Treacy, of Portlaw, Waterford.

The Lord Mayor said that he was sure the audience was happy to see one of their countrymen doing so well, and they would extend their heartiest congratulations to the winner, and also to the enterprising firm of Messrs. Carroll and Co., Dundalk.

When the cheers for the Lord Mayor had ceased, Mr. W. J. Carroll, of Messrs. Carroll, thanked the Lord Mayor for making the presentation.

The interlude concluded with the playing by Jimmy Campbell and his orchestra of "Flow gently, Sweet Afton."

Mr. C. E. McConnell, managing director, was present on behalf of McConnell's Advertising Services.

YESTERDAY IN THE LAW COURTS

LEIX RATE COLLECTION

COUNTY COUNCIL'S ACTION

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE HANNA.)

In the action of the County Council of Leix against James Brennan, Ballyclohane, Wolfhill, Leix; John J. Brennan, Crettyard, Leix, and Matthew Hughes, Kilcruise, Wolfhill,

Mr. Lavery, K.C., with whom was Mr. McGonigal (instructed by Messrs. Meehan and Byrne), for the plaintiffs, applied for liberty to issue execution on foot of a rate collector's bond against the defendants for a judgment for £2,000, obtained against them by reason of the default of James Brennan as rate collector in the collection of rates under a warrant issued to him by the plaintiffs on the 6th September, 1934. The other two defendants were sued as his sureties.

When the case was previously before the Court it had said Mr. Lavery, been suggested by counsel for the defendants that there were certain rates collected subsequent to the suspension of James Brennan for which they should get credit. An affidavit had been filed on behalf of the plaintiffs stating that credit had been given for all moneys so collected.

Mr. J. J. Walsh, with whom was Mr. Brereton Barry, K.C. (instructed by Mr. W. L. Duggan), for the defendants, submitted that judgment should be given against them for only £971 12s. 9d. This, he said, was not a case where the full amount of the judgment would not be recovered, and, although the relief he sought was small, he thought the defendants were entitled to it. It was not suggested that the defendant James Brennan, the rate collector, had pursued any malpractices in connection with the collection of the rates. He could not collect the rates because the warrant was taken away from him, and he was confident, as he stated in affidavit, that, if he could be put in the position of collecting the rates, he could at least collect some of them. Otherwise the defendant James Brennan believed that they would never be collected.

Mr. Lavery said that when the judgment was made and paid the County Council would do everything possible to collect the rates in respect of which the judgment was obtained, and account to the defendants for the money so collected.

Mr Walsh asked the Court to suggest to the plaintiffs that they should facilitate the defendants in the collection of the arrears.

Mr. Justice Hanna said that he would give judgment for the full amount. He was sure that the County Council, or whoever was acting for that body, would see, after the judgment had been satisfied, that everything would be done to collect the arrears, and that the arrears so collected would go to the relief of the defendants.

TWO CELEBRITIES IN DUBLIN

SURPRISED AT ABSENCE OF STATE OPERA

Celebrities from Canada and Norway make their appearance, for the first time in this country, at the Theatre Royal to-day. They are Miss Eide Norena and Mr. Alfredo Tomasini. Both were rather disappointed to find that Dublin had no State opera house, because, as Mr. Tomasini observed, in even small Continental countries, such as Latvia, Finland and Esthonia, such opera houses had been established by the Governments. In those countries the artists were engaged on a yearly basis; they did not get big salaries, but they got enough to make a "decent living." "They are really civil servants," he added, "and when they retire they receive a pension. Each year they get two months' holidays and in that period they may study at the State's expense."

While he was in Italy Mr. Tomasini went on a tour of these countries with a company sent out by Signor Mussolini and financed by the various States which they visited. The object of the tour was to show true Italian opera to the State companies.

When Miss Norena and Mr. Tomasini heard that they were to sing to-day in a theatre capable of holding 3,700 people they were much surprised. It is one of the biggest auditoriums in which they have sung—the Scala, in Milan, and other Continental opera houses rarely seat more than 2,500 persons.

Mr. Tomasini was born in Winnipeg, and first came to Europe as a member of the Canadian contingent soon after the outbreak of the Great War. At Loos he was wounded and gassed, but he did not get home again until 1919. Then he took up singing and went to Italy, where he worked for twelve years. That stay in Italy was cut short in 1933 when he was given the option of becoming a naturalised Italian, or leaving the country. He decided to go to Chicago, where he worked with the opera company. Last year he did a season at Covent Garden, and he will return for another season there in the spring of next year.

From Norway comes Miss Eide Norena, but she learnt to sing in England under the late Fonso Martini, and then made her début at the Scala in Milan. She has travelled widely since she left Norway twelve years ago, and has spent eight opera seasons with the Paris company and four with the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York. After her Dublin engagement she has to return to the Continent, and go on to Copenhagen for two operas before crossing to America for another season in New York.

In her opinion, America and England, the two richest countries, are the poorest in opera, and this, she thinks, might be due to the influence of the radio.

A request that the application of the master of the Spanish Government steamer, Cabo Roche, for summonses against his crew, alleging conspiracy to disobey him, should be withdrawn, was granted by the Justices at Gibraltar yesterday. In asking for withdrawal of the application, counsel intimated that it might be renewed when he was in a better position to support the application with legal authority.

FATHER'S AND SON'S WILLS

QUESTION OF CONSTRUCTION

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE MEREDITH)

Patrick Scanlan, O'Connell avenue, Limerick, commission agent, as one of the executors of Denis Toomey, late of 35 William street, Limerick, brought a summons to determine questions arising on the construction of the will of Patrick Toomey, late of 35 William street, Limerick, who died on 25th March, 1912, and also on the construction of the will of the latter's son, Denis, who died on 2nd April, 1935. The defendants by the summons were Bridget Toomey, Mary O'Halloran, Denis Toomey, junior, and others.

It appeared that Patrick Toomey, by his will dated 24th October, 1910, provided that, after his wife's death, the business of mineral water manufacturer and beer and stout bottler should go to his sons, Denis and Stephen, during Stephen's lifetime, and on Stephen's death to Denis absolutely, and to Denis's children in case of Denis's death before Stephen died, and after the death of both to Denis's children.

An affidavit by the plaintiff set out that Stephen died before Denis. The latter married twice, and was survived by seven children of his first marriage, including the defendant, Mrs. Mary O'Halloran, and the defendant, Denis Toomey, junior, and also six children of his second marriage, all of whom were under age and unmarried.

By his will dated 9th March, 1934, Denis directed that his business be carried on by his son, Denis, junior, and that the profits should be applied for the support of his unmarried children, except Jack, residing with him at the time of his death, and that his residence should be retained and occupied by those children. Having made bequests to his sons Jack, Tom and Patrick, he bequeathed the residue of his property to his unmarried daughters in equal shares as tenants in common.

The questions for the decision of the Court were: 1. Did Denis Toomey, under the will of his father, Patrick Toomey, take an absolute interest in the business? 2. If so, what estate do the unmarried children of Denis Toomey take in the business and the residence?

Mr. Poole (instructed by Messrs. Fish and Co.) appeared for the plaintiff.

Mr. Lavery, K.C., who, with Mr. Liston (instructed by Mr. J. S. McNeice), appeared for Mrs. M. O'Halloran and the other married daughters of Denis Toomey, argued that Denis did not take an absolute interest under his father's will.

Mr. Michael Binchy, K.C., and Mr. James Comyn (instructed by Messrs. Roger Fox and Co.), for the children of Denis Toomey's second marriage, argued that Denis, on the death of Stephen, took an absolute interest in the business, and that, therefore, his gift of the residue to his unmarried daughters was valid.

Mr. Joseph Healy (instructed by Messrs. Dundon and Treacy) appeared for Denis Toomey, jun.

Mr. Justice Meredith held that the late Denis Toomey took an absolute interest under his father's will, and, therefore, was entitled to dispose of the property by his own will. He adjourned consideration of questions arising under the will of Denis, and allowed all parties their costs.

THREE ACTIONS SETTLED

SEQUEL TO ROAD ACCIDENT

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE HANNA)

Mr. Matheson (instructed by Messrs. O'Keeffe and Lynch) applied on behalf of Helen Ahrenfeldt, suing by her mother, Annie E. Ahrenfeldt, of 3 Place Malesherbes, Paris, to have a consent to the settlement of her action against Marguerita Victoria Nelson, as administratrix of the late Constance E. Jameson, of Urglin Glebe, Benakerry, Carlow, for damages for personal injuries, received and made a rule of Court.

It appeared that the plaintiff was a passenger in a motor car the property of the late Constance E. Jameson, and that she was thrown against the windscreen and received several cuts about the head and face when the car came into collision with a lorry near Kill, Co. Kildare, on 6th March of last year.

The consent provided for the payment of £500 to the plaintiff, £100 to her mother in respect of her claim for medical and other expenses, and a sum for costs.

Mr. Justice Hanna received the consent and made it a rule of Court.

A TULLAMORE ACCIDENT

In an action of Patrick Maher, suing by Annie Maher, of Ballyduff, Tullamore, against P. and H. Egan, Ltd., Tullamore,

Mr. Walter Callan (instructed by Mr. Dermot Meagher) applied on behalf of the plaintiff to have a consent to settlement received and made a rule of Court.

The plaintiff claimed damages for injuries caused to him in a collision between a lorry the property of the defendants and a horse-cart in which he was driving on the road from Tullamore to Ballyduff on 13th of last May.

The consent provided for the payment of £150 to the plaintiff in full settlement of all claims.

Mr. Justice Hanna received the consent and made it a rule of Court.

On the application of Mr. Callan (instructed by Mr. Dermot Meagher), for the plaintiff, a consent to settlement for £50 and £30 9s. for medical expenses and costs was received and made a rule of Court in an action of Mary Bridget Molloy, of Ballyduff, Tullamore, against P. and H. Egan, Ltd., for injuries received in the same collision when she was travelling in the cart which was driven by Patrick Maher.

Messrs. Hoey and Denning were the solicitors for the defendants in both these actions.

TULLAMORE MAN WINS £5,000

The Lord Mayor of Dublin, Alderman Alfred Byrne, T.D., handing over Messrs. P. J. Carroll and Co.'s cheque for £5,000 to the representative of Mr. Henry C. Hoey, St. Anne's, Clonminch road, Tullamore, at the Theatre Royal, Dublin, last night. On the right are Mr. Walter Carroll (Managing Director of P. J. Carroll and Co., Ltd., Dundalk) and Mr. C. E. McConnell. Mr. Hoey held a half share in the "Sweet Afton" free gift ticket which drew Laureat II. for the Cambridgeshire. A cheque for the remaining £5,000 is being handed to Miss Rose Treacy, of Portlaw, Co. Waterford, in the Waterford Theatre Royal on Monday next by the Mayor of Waterford.

MISSING DUBLIN WOMEN

FRIENDS STILL WITHOUT INFORMATION

There are still no clues as to the whereabouts of either of the two missing Dublin women. Each of them is 33 years of age.

The family of Miss Jean Annette Leslie, the Dublin teacher, who disappeared over a week ago, is offering a reward for any information that may lead to her whereabouts. It is thought that she may be suffering from loss of memory, and an intensive search is being conducted in England, Scotland and Ireland. Dragging operations are being continued in the Dodder River and in the disused quarry near Orwell road.

Mrs. Victoria McIntosh, who has been missing since the evening of Armistice Day, has not since been seen. Her husband told a reporter that as his wife had not been feeling well, she decided to stay in and read while he went to an Armistice Service in St. Catherine's Church, Donore avenue. When he returned about 10.30 p.m. she was not in the house. Throughout the night he searched for her at the houses of friends and at other places. In the morning he called the police. It was possible, he said, that his wife might have gone to her sister in North Wales, but she had not taken any money with her. Since Thursday morning the police have searched the city and surrounding country, but without success. Before her marriage Mrs. McIntosh was a typist in a city firm. She was of a cheerful disposition and was in good health. As far as her husband knew, she had no worries, financial or otherwise.

IRISHMAN'S DIARY

The Girl Guides' Congress : Don Bradman : The Countess of Listowel : "Dropped" Handlebars : Short of Matches

The Countess of Listowel

The Countess of Listowel, whose sister-in-law (Lady Patricia Hare) was in the wedding news this week, has just completed an unusual trip. Lady Listowel, be it remembered, is not just an ordinary member of smart society. She is a Hungarian, whose name before she married into the peerage was Judith Marffy Mantuano. She is an authority on her own country, knows its history from beginning to end, and during her recent globe-trotting expedition she took it as one of the subjects of a series of lectures she delivered in America. There she addressed vast audiences at such centres as Chicago, Washington and Baltimore. Besides telling America all about Hungary, she was able to enlighten that country about the position of women in Europe. Leaving America, she returned West to East again, and on her way to England she went through Russia. There are many Hungarians in the States, and obviously all of them who could turned up to hear their compatriot speak on their homeland. Besides her lectures, Lady Listowel has a small girl to interest her; for her daughter, Lady Deirdre Hare, is now about two. It is noteworthy that this young person bears an Irish name, but, then, I am sure her clever mother knows all about Irish myth and legend.

Forthcoming Congress

It has been decided to hold the Girl Guides' Congress in Dublin next year. This great world movement is, I should think, showing a signal honour to Ireland in this gesture. It will mean, too, that those attending the 1937 Congress in Dublin will be among the most interesting visitors of the year. Already it is planned to stage a spectacular pageant of Irish history, beginning with the adventures of Queen Maeve, at Powerscourt. Viscountess Powerscourt is the Chief Commissioner of the Irish Free State Girl Guides. It is expected that the Duchesse Brady will come over from America. This lady, who holds an important social position in the States, is of Irish extraction, as indicated by her surname. Her title of Duchesse is a Papal one. She has long been identified with the Girl Guide movement in America, and has been prominent at the European headquarters in Switzerland. Among the Irish ladies on the Free State Council are Lady Irene Congreve, Miss Dease, and Lady Nugent (Cavan). It is, of course, a foregone conclusion that Lord and Lady Baden-Powell will attend the Dublin Congress.

Oranges to Toys

From oranges to toys describes the itinerary of Mr. and Mrs. Nuttall Smith, two go-ahead people who have just arrived in Irish industry this week. He is a Tipperary man, and she is English, of Irish extraction, and very interesting. They own an orange farm in the Transvaal from which stay-at-home Irish folk have been obtaining their morning fruit juice for some time past. But this pair, evidently tired of the monotony of fruit-farming in South Africa, have come here full of new ideas about toy-making. I am glad of this; for we in Ireland are rather badly off in the matter of original native toys. Mrs. Nuttall Smith agrees with me as to the iniquity of giving a little Irish boy a miniature gun or tin soldier to play with. Instead, he should be given, as I have always said, a little wooden horse, to divert his blood-thirsty little mind with. That is why Mrs. Nuttall Smith intends to make models of Dan Bulger winning the Cambridgeshire with Tommy Weston up! She is holding an exhibition of her toys at the Aonach in the Mansion House next month.

Don Bradman's Connections

The story of Don Bradman, the horse who dead-heated with Delaneige in the Sefton on Thursday, is news for Ireland. Perhaps, I should say the story of Don Bradman's connections, and I am sure the equine hero will not mind if I pass him over this time, as he has had sufficient of the limelight. Don Bradman's owner is Mr. Wilkinson, a steel magnate, with large interests in Birmingham, but his wife is an Irishwoman, and at one time Miss Clune, of Limerick. She has, by the way, many friends in Dublin still. In London, where the Wilkinsons have a lovely residence in Mayfair, besides a place in Worcestershire, they are always referred to as the Don Bradman Wilkinsons. The horse is trained by George Jackson, who is a son-in-law of the owner. Now for Don Bradman, the horse; but I am sure all the sporting scribes have already told about how, after having been completely broken down two years ago, he was completely restored, and has since last year been showing wonderful form over the country. Well, I know a Dublin admirer of his who had a little flutter on him the other day just because of who owned him. As he started at 20's, half the odds over the dead-heat was very nice, too.

Matches

Only those who have lived for awhile in the heart of the country, miles from the nearest town, can have the slightest idea of the desperate plight of the householder or the smoker who runs out of matches. Sometimes the certainty of a famine is noticed in time to keep a small lamp lighting and turned very low, so that there may be some flame to start the kitchen fire next morning; while the smoker will make countless journeys into the house during the day in order to get a light for his pipe by means of a folded bit of paper thrust between the bars of the grate. But all too often the shortage is not noticed until it is too late, and that is where the trouble begins. In most country districts nowadays there is a miniature shop by the roadside where, without travelling to the distant town, things like pints of paraffin oil, packets of "fags" and boxes of matches may be purchased in an emergency. Sometimes, however, the messenger finds that the shopkeeper, too, has let his or her supply of matches run out: "that"—as a disappointed customer has said of the subsequent confusion—"is where we come to the economicals of it."

A Hold-Up

Mrs. John Pollok, of Mountainstown, always submits with a good grace to be held up and questioned every time I meet her. When I saw her in Dublin on Thursday she told me her son, Mr. Arthur Murray Smith, is still working hard with his regiment at Weedon. He is at the Equitation School there, and his mother tells me he is hardly likely to come over to Ireland sooner than next May. His wife, the former Miss Ulrica Thynne, is hunting, I hear, with the Pytchley. I also learnt from Mrs. Pollok that her sister, Viscountess Massereene and Ferrard, who has been at her town house in London, is now returning to her lovely place on the Island of Mull. Her son, the Hon. John Clotworthy Talbot Foster Whyte Melville Skeffington, who is now 22, is a second lieutenant in the Black Watch Supplementary Reserve of Officers.

Racing Handlebars

In the present outcry against cyclists by motorists who, according to themselves, spend all their time in trying to avoid collision with the riders, very little has been said on the subject of the racing handlebars now so popular on our busiest roads. Yet it seems to me, as I watch the cyclists on the Bray road, that the crouching attitude made compulsory by these handlebars must be accountable for a great many accidents. To ride bent almost double may add to one's capacity for speed, and would be all right on a racing track where there is no other traffic. This is where these handlebars first were used, of course, and as long as they stayed there no one was likely to criticise them, no matter how uncomfortable they seemed to the uninitiated. On a busy main road it is quite another matter to cycle in an attitude that makes it very difficult, if not impossible, to watch the other users of the highway. The present day prevalence of these racing handlebars is a real source of danger. Last month, on the Dublin-Bray road, a crouching cyclist rode right into an approaching car, whose driver did all in his power to avoid the collision, in which the rider received fatal injuries.

GERMANY UNDER ADOLF HITLER

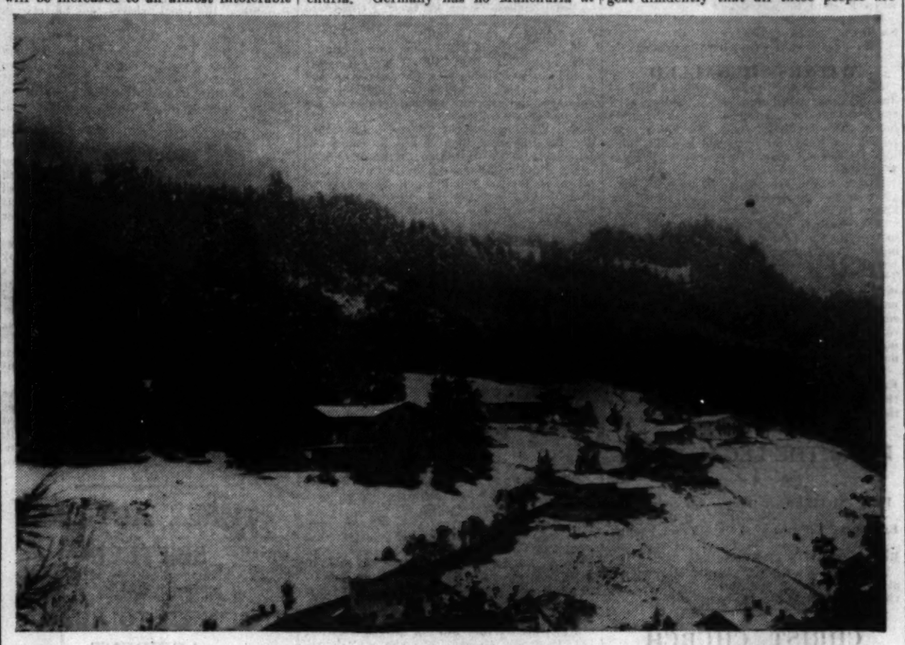
How Devaluation Abroad Has Affected the Reich

GERMANY'S ANXIETY TO MAKE FRIENDS WITH BRITAIN

(BY NICHEVO)

(TWELFTH ARTICLE.)

DEVALUATION abroad has done enormous damage to Germany's export trade. The countries with whom Germany was doing her most lucrative business slipped off their currency standards just at the time when the Four Year Plan was beginning to get under weigh, and now the German Government finds itself in an exceedingly awkward position. Even when the currencies of France, Italy, Czechoslovakia, and the rest were reasonably high, Germany's export trade was carried on only by the help of subsidies, export bounties, and all sorts of other artificial stimuli. Now the disadvantages of an undevaluated currency will be increased to an almost intolerable degree, because these countries no longer will be able to buy German goods. Indeed, as Dr. Schacht is reported to have said recently, "we could not export even if we gave our goods away."



View of Berchtesgaden under snow.

Exports and War

The effect of this condition of affairs on German policy is bound to be far-reaching. It hardly is too much to say that the problem of German exports is almost identical with the problem of war and peace. Let us go back a bit in history. Before the World War the legend "Made in Germany" was familiar in every part of the globe. Germany was exporting her manufactured goods in great quantities, and with the proceeds she was buying essential raw materials, foodstuffs, etc. In those days she had substantial colonies in Africa and elsewhere, and, although her national standard of living never was so high as that, for instance, of Great Britain, she was one of the most prosperous nations in the world.

Consider her position to-day. As a result of territorial losses in Europe after the War, Germany's area at present is less than that of France. Her soil is not fertile. Outside Bavaria and other parts of the South, it is almost entirely composed of sand, and, although every available inch of it is cultivated in the most intensive way, its yield is inadequate to the enormous demands upon it. Germany's population is getting on for seventy millions, and it is increasing rapidly, whereas that of France is on the decline. In order to feed this population, and to maintain the standard of living at a reasonably high level, Germany simply must import certain essentials. Despite the production of synthetics, there must continue to be a shortage of raw materials, and however successful the Four Years' Plan may turn out to be, the next four years must be tided over in some way.

Now, in order to be able to import those commodities which she cannot do without, Germany must export her manufactured goods. She has no gold wherewith to buy raw materials in the world markets. General Göring declares that the Allies stole all Germany's gold by making her pay reparations; actually the folly of her own Governments, particularly during the inflation period, was the real cause. But the fact is that she has no gold. Furthermore, she has no colonies. There has been a great deal of exaggeration in regard to this colonial problem, in Italy as well as in Germany, and if by some miracle all Germany's lost colonies should be restored to her to-morrow, the disappointment of her people would be deep. Nevertheless, if she had some colonies, particularly in Africa, she could buy raw materials from them in her own currency, which would be the great thing.

An Urgent Need

Lacking gold and colonies, Germany has only one remaining method whereby she can obtain raw materials and those foodstuffs which she cannot produce at home. She must export. Thus, and only thus, can she procure those Devisen which she needs so badly. Now, ever since the War, the markets of the world have been virtually closed to German exports. The Allies crippled the German people with an appalling bill of reparations—something like £6,000,000,000, which no nation on earth ever could hope to pay. J. M. Keynes realised this fact at the time, but nobody would listen to him. At the same time, headed by the United States, the Powers that had fought against Germany proceeded to erect unscalable tariff walls against her. So she could not find a market for her exports, and consequently could not pay anybody anything. Hence the milk, or rather the lack of milk, in the coconut.

Now the situation is becoming desperate. With her expanding population, her shrunken territory, and her shortage of food and raw materials, some Absatz, or foreign market for her surplus of manufactured goods must be found. A like problem was facing Japan a few years ago, and she promptly solved it, or almost solved it, by her conquest and colonisation of Manchuria. Germany has no Manchuria at her doorstep. She also has no Abyssinia; so what can she do? The ultimate answer is that there is one thing that she can do consummately well, and that is to make war.

No Desire for War

Let me make myself perfectly clear on this point; for it would be a great pity if there should be any misunderstanding. I did not meet a single man or woman in Germany over thirty years of age who wanted war. I will go farther. I do not believe that there is a single man or woman over thirty in the country who does not regard the prospect of war with loathing. Remember, the Germans had a pretty thin time during the last war. Hitler himself not only fought in the front line; but he was blinded. Goering succeeded Richthofen as commander of the famous "Flying Circus," and, although Goebbels did not fight—he was prevented from joining up owing to his club foot—he lived through the horrors of the starvation period.

One may assume, therefore, that none of these leaders wants another war. If anybody wants it, it is some of the thoughtless youths who were not born when the last war started, and still believe, or imagine, that war is a glorious adventure. Yet I am convinced that in the long run war will be inevitable; not because the Germans want it, but merely because there is no other conceivable way out of their present difficulties. A nation must live, and a nation that lives by its trade must be able to export. This simple proposition cannot be controverted. There is a feeling in Germany to-day that Herr Hitler will be able to solve the nation's problem without the need for recourse to war; but that feeling is beginning to wane. The idea is—or was—that, if the German people could only become strong enough, the peoples who have those things that Germany requires would hand them over without a struggle, and everybody—that is to say, everybody in Germany—would be happy.

Successful Audacity

The Germans have seen how the sublime audacity of the National Socialists has succeeded already. When Hitler reintroduced conscription there was much nervousness in Germany, lest the French, who then had a marked preponderance in military strength, might invade the Rhineland, as they invaded the Ruhr in 1923; but nothing happened. Hitler got away with it. Again, when the German Army reoccupied the Rhineland, the people once more were afraid; but again nothing happened, and the Hitlerite stock rose enormously.

At first the novelty of this kind of thing gripped the imagination of the German people, who had been accustomed to being bullied by outside Powers ever since the War. At last, they thought, we have somebody who will stick up for us, and will show the world that we cannot be dictated to any longer. As time went on they began to get used to the Hitler tactics vis à vis the outside world; but suddenly they began to realise two things. One was that the Government was building up a huge military organisation, even greater than that which existed in 1914, and the other was that Germany's neighbours were getting rather restive.

The fact that other countries also are arming themselves to the teeth has not escaped the notice of the Germans. Why are these big armies being raised at a time when nobody has any money to spare? Surely, they are not being raised merely for fun. What the Germans are only now beginning to suspect is that the outside nations are becoming afraid of Germany. No German believes for a moment that Herr Hitler has aggressive intentions. Everybody is convinced of his pacific plans, and does not doubt for a moment that the obvious preparations that are being made in Germany are of a purely defensive nature. The old, vicious circle is whizzing around again. "Look at Russia," you will hear. "What does she want that great army for? What about Czechoslovakia and Rumania; what about the Italians; above all, what about the French, with their Maginot line and all the rest of it?" You may suggest diffidently that all these people are arming because they are afraid that Germany is planning to attack them, and you will be laughed at—outwardly. It is the ancient story of encirclement. The world is jealous of Hitler's Germany. That is why it will not allow her to export; and it is only waiting for the opportunity to attack her again, in an effort to complete the annihilation that was started in 1914.

Russia's Plans

This atmosphere is being fostered sedulously by the Government's propaganda department, and the majority of Germans believe sincerely that, if war does come, it will not be Herr Hitler's fault. In other words, they believe that their old enemies, headed by Soviet Russia, are determined to attack a peace-loving people just out of sheer wickedness. Strangely enough, whereas Britain was the arch-enemy during the last war, she is intensely popular now, and every possible effort is being made to be nice to British people. Times certainly have changed since those war days in Germany. Who ever will forget the Gott Strafe England period, when the Hymn of Hate was being sung in that very Bavaria where everybody is so charming now? "Wir haben nur einen einzigen Feind—England"—we have but one single foe—England.

Now all that has disappeared. Russia is the arch-enemy. Britain is a friend. The German never forgets that he and the Anglo-Saxon are kinsmen. After all, he will remind you, we are of the same race. He is particularly proud of the German connections of the British Royal Family, which is almost as popular in Germany as it is in England. In a cinema in Munich a few weeks ago, when the Topical News reel was showing King Edward changing aeroplanes in Paris on his way home from holiday, the whole audience became wild with enthusiasm. You will find many similar indications of Germany's altered attitude towards the British. Subconsciously the German people feel that their fate in the next war will depend, as it depended twenty years ago, on Britain's attitude; for the same issues, greatly magnified in some respects, are, or will be, at stake, and the same factors will decide them.

Fear of War

This fear of war is growing in Germany. Although the people acquit Herr Hitler of a desire to precipitate a conflict, they are beginning to realise that their earlier hopes of a condition of affairs in which they might be able to recover all their colonies, their lost provinces and their former markets without being forced to mobilise a single man, were, to say the least of it, over-optimistic. They know in their hearts that the progress of the Nazi movement, with its provocative programme, has alarmed the outside world, although they have no idea of the extent to which this alarm has grown; and even Herr Hitler's great popularity has not been sufficient to prevent a feeling of vague uneasiness among the mass of the people, which, in certain circumstances, easily might turn into active resentment against the Administration.

ELIZABETH SCHUMANN is the visiting artiste at this week's concert at the Wellington Hall, Belfast. Considered to be the perfect interpreter of Mozart, the distinguished singer will be heard in two Mozart arias early in the programme, with violin obbligato played by Philip Whiteway. The B.B.C. Northern Ireland Orchestra, augmented for the occasion, will be conducted by Peter Montgomery. The principal orchestral work in the portion for broadcasting is Beethoven's Fourth Symphony.

In addition to the main items of entertainment for Saturday listeners, Radio Athlone commences two new series of broadcasts. One is "Round the Cafés," in which the microphone will pick up music from the various popular Dublin rendezvous, commencing to-day with Roberts' Café at 5.45, and at 8.5 Mr. Sean Keating will be the first to contribute to the "If I Were Director of Broadcasting" series of talks.

Choral concerts of importance are a feature of to-night's broadcasting. Part 2 of Mendelssohn's Oratorio, "Elijah," will be performed by the Liverpool Welsh Choral Union and relayed from the Central Hall, Liverpool. In this work May Blyth (soprano), Margaret Tann-Williams (contralto), Tudor Davies (tenor) and Horace Stevens (bass) will act as soloists, T. Hopkin Evans conducting.

Then, in the Midland programme at 7.30, the combined choirs of the Birmingham Festival Choral Society and the Derby Choral Union, with the City of Birmingham Orchestra in support, will perform Schubert's Tantum Ergo, for vocal quartet, chorus and orchestra, and Part 1 of Elgar's "Dream of Gerontius." Like in the Liverpool concert, the solo work is given only to first-rate singers—they are: Marjorie Browne (soprano), Freda Townson (contralto), Parry Jones (tenor) and William Parsons (bass). The concert, which takes place in Birmingham Town Hall, will be directed by Harold Gray.

More Air History

Sky Gipsy. By Claudia Cranston. London: Harrap. 10/6 net.

Riders of the Sky. By Harry Harper. London: Hodder and Stoughton. 5/- net.

Air Mail. By F. V. Monk and H. T. Winter. London: Percy Press. 3/6 net.

Why Aeroplanes Fly. By Arthur Elton and Robert Fairthorne. London: Longmans, Green. 2/6 net.

THIS year has seen a spate of books about aviation flowing from the presses—some good, some bad and others not worth mentioning.

Miss Claudia Cranston, New York author-playwright, took a trip around South America in the flying-boats of Pan-American Airways. A few years ago a journey up the Amazon would have provided quite enough material for a book. Miss Cranston, however, covered 25,000 miles by air in her search for the material of "Sky Gipsy." The first impression one gets from the book is that the Pan-American network of airways is particularly well organised. America has helped civil aviation to develop rapidly—not for strategic reasons, like Great Britain and other European countries, but because it is an economic means of transport over long distances.

"I" creeps in so much in travel books that they sometimes become very boring. Miss Cranston writes in the third person, and continually refers to "Claudia," until one begins really to dislike the name. This is the only poor feature of the book. It is well-written by an observant woman who has taken the trouble to read up the ancient and modern history of the places she was visiting. Miss Cranston has given her publishers a very entertaining travel book of a novel sort.

Mr. Harper's Reminiscences

Mr. Harry Harper has been studying and writing about aviation for more than twenty-five years, and so "Riders of the Sky" contains some first-hand impressions of personalities who have made the history of flying. It is quite a readable book about the "sky-riders"—a word which, in view of Mr. Harper's experience, he should not have used—from the days of De Rozier to the modern air liner pilot, with a glimpse at the future of world airways and a portrait gallery of some of the leading personalities.

"Air Mail" is another history book which traces the growth of the "flying postmen's" work from 1784, when Jeffries and Blanchard crossed the English Channel in a balloon, onwards. Jeffries and Blanchard stripped themselves, and threw their clothes overboard to lighten the weight while crossing the sea, and it is presumed that the letter they carried went overboard as well—it has never been seen.

Early Air Mails

The authors recall the mail flights between London and Windsor in 1912 and the starting of the London-Paris air mail (in converted war 'planes) in August, 1919. The R.A.F. was flying letters to Cologne for the Army of Occupation on the Rhine some time before that date. Then comes history about the crossing of the Atlantic by Alcock and Brown, the Australia flight of the brothers Smith, and so on to the foundation of Imperial Airways. The rest of the book is taken up with explanations of the operating of the air mail services and the routes covered. All this is done in quite a readable fashion, and the book is of considerable interest in view of the fact that, where saving in time can be effected, the British Postmaster-General proposes to send all first-class letter mail by air to places within the Empire (without extra charge) next year.

Why They Fly

"Why Aeroplanes Fly" is the first book in "The March of Time" series which, if it lives up to the promise of No. 1, will be an interesting collection. The book is something on the lines of a documentary film—it puts the aeroplane into its historical perspective; explains the principles governing flight (in elementary mechanics and omitting tedious technical matter), and, finally, discusses the social implications of the aeroplane in the modern world. With a number of illustrations, diagrams as well as photographs, the authors have compressed a large amount of really sound information into a small space—less than 100 pages. The book is one of definite value and is well produced

Shorter Notices

John Lane and the Nineties. By J. Lewis May. London: Bodley Head. 15/- net.

THE curious and exotic years which found their most typical expression in the work of Wilde and Beardsley was influenced in no small measure by the courage and foresight of John Lane, the publisher. In the Yellow Book, first published by him in April, 1894, is to be found the very soul of the fin de siècle—Le Gallienne, whom Wilde described as a "sheep in sheep's clothing"; Max Beerbohm, "born middle-aged"; Ella D'Arcy, George Saintsbury, Arthur Symons, and so on. Lane in one magazine had gathered together all the most brilliant and most representative figures of his time.

In Mr. May's book we have an interesting and often amusing picture of those days when art was as often for Mr. Lane's sake as for art's.

Further Heroes of Modern Adventure. By Bridges and Tiltman. London: Harrap. 7/6 net.

The cream of over a dozen racy tales of adventure are contained in this book. The authors have chosen well, and their book is thoroughly representative of modern travel and enterprise. First there is the story of Sven Hedin's journey across the three great deserts of Central Asia: the greatest accomplishment in a book of daring adventures. Less striking, but dangerous in their way, are the accounts of Dr. E. A. Baker's wanderings below ground in the caves of these islands like a modern Arne Saknussem. The admirable precis of Señor Burky's doings in South America will drive all who read to the book itself. An account of the celebrated pirates of Bias Bay by A. E. Lilius, most enterprising of travellers, is another exciting chapter. There are some good photographs, some of which were taken during the Houston Mount Everest air expedition.

Epic Tales of Ireland

Some Valuable Translations

Ancient Irish Tales. Edited by Tom Peete Cross and Clark Harris Slover. London: Harrap. 10/6 net.

THIS is a much more important and valuable book than its American format suggests. It is a work of true Gaelic learning. More than two score ancient texts are translated and edited, some by well-known translators like O'Grady, and some by the American gentlemen, who, as Tom and Clark, would not be expected by grave Europeans to be highly-learned Celticists. Fault can be found with some American mannerisms, but not, so far as the present reviewer has found, with the quality of the renderings, or with the admirable notes. We could wish for a different choice of some of the texts taken, but even here it is surprising how successfully the editors have kept to representative pieces and have avoided triviality.

The Ulster Cycle

The biggest part of the work is given to the Ulster Cycle. In fact, there is little of the Ulster series of epic tales that is omitted. If Tom and Clark (may we allude to them in this homely manner?) have failed to disentangle the complex strategy of the Northern Iliad, they may plead that no published Irish work has done this, so that they are as good as their neighbours.

Some will say that it was a pity to tackle the Finn cycle without going into it equally thoroughly. However, the editors will reply, doubtless, that they have kept chiefly to the ancient texts, and show the cycle as it existed before the great flight of Early Modern Irish poems developed the story.

A Service to Ireland

This book should be read with a Gaelic literary history. It will be understood in the light of that work, and will throw light back on the history. Without such a companion it may seem difficult to the ordinary reader. However, it certainly is a work that ought to be in every Irish library, public or private. Its value is of the first rank, and we are grateful to Tom and Clark for a big service to Ireland and the world's knowledge of Ireland.

Religion in Russia

The Russian Church. By J. N. Danzas. London: Sheed and Ward. 3/6 net.

THIS is an engrossing study of the Russian religious mind. In his foreword, the author says: "When the collapse of the Tsar's empire put an end to Russian Caesaro-papism, it seemed that the main obstacle in the way of reunion of the Russian Church with the Holy See had disappeared, but such hopes were premature, and there is no change in the attitude of the Russian Church and her faithful." The author throughout lays stress on the fact of nationalism as the predominant note of the Russian Church. She was the bulwark of nationalism in the State, yet the State stripped her of ecclesiastical character, and she became merely one of its administrative bodies, with her parish priests part of the police and relegated to the lowest order of society. Schisms and sects broke its unity, for it was afraid to face the logical consequence of its theological pretention.

When the revolution came, loyalty to the Church assumed the shape of a mystical, somewhat hazy religiosity, endemic in the Church and in all the dissident sects. The Church has become a bodiless phantom; her spirit lives.

Mystical Sects

The first Five Year Plan was "to do away with all trace of religion." M. Danzas says at the end of the first Five Year Plan the Soviet Government "was further from their object than a decade earlier" . . . "the leader of the godless found that where a church was destroyed mystical sectarianism sprung up, and its swift dissemination was such that it presents a greater danger for the régime . . . penetrating . . . to the very citadels of atheism." In his concluding pages the author says the stronghold of religious fervour in the U.S.S.R. is not within the Orthodox Church, but in the mystical sects. "Persecution has given birth to a religious movement which is not only a threat to Communism, but to the Russian Church also." The book is excellently translated by Countess Olga Bennigsen.

Anecdotes of the Opera

Among the Covent Garden Stars. By Josephine O'Donnell. London: Paul. 18/- net.

MISS O'DONNELL was born in a small Irish town, and from that unpromising beginning she rose to be secretary to the Managing Directors of Covent Garden Opera House during a period of ten years. Here she tells anecdotes of the stars with which she worked, and of all the thousand and one little incidents that occur beneath the great roof of the building. Miss O'Donnell has not outstanding literary style, or, indeed, a particularly riotous sense of humour, but because very little is known of the private life of opera stars, and because opera stars in themselves are spectacular people, and because there is something romantic and moving about grand opera, her somewhat bald reports of what she has seen and heard always have the power to hold one's attention. As Sir Thomas Beecham says in his introduction: "Although the work in a great theatre is almost as systematised as that of a motor factory, it enjoys the precious compensation of provoking at any moment of the day or night the most unexpected and humorous situations." Miss O'Donnell was "in on" the majority of these diversions.

Science Made Easy

Great Scientific Achievements. By Professor A. M. Low. London: Nelson. 3/6 net.

PROFESSORS EDDINGTON, Jeans and Low, leading men in their own branches of science, have all tried to give the general reader some idea of what science has achieved and what it is striving to achieve.

In his latest book, Professor Low, who is certainly one of the most prolific of the scientific writers, has surveyed a wide field. He covers everything, from great buildings, ships, salvage and docks to radio, hydro-electrification and aviation. In the section on hydro-electric schemes he classes the Shannon scheme as one of the four greatest and most interesting water-power stations—the others being in the United States and Canada.

He uses simple language in explaining how the various projects were carried out, and contrives to make them into a thrilling series of stories which should be good entertainment for any man of any age.

Modern, and not so Modern

A Selection of New Poems

Scenes moroccan, by neil pearson. oxford: basil blackwell.
Ten Irish Love Songs. By Sydney Bell. Dublin: Talbot Press. 2/6 net.
Peacock Pie. By Walter de la Mare. London: Constable. 6/- net.
My Other Heart. By Doris Kerman. London: E. O. Beck. 5/- net.

"scenes moroccan," by neil pearson (sic), is a truly remarkable volume of verse. Whatever one may think of its poetic quality, there can be no doubt of its freedom from the shackles of outworn literary convention. mr. pearson would seem to have profited greatly by the typographical experiments of E. E. Cummings and the exiles of the Rive Gauche; he dispenses with capitals and punctuation and restricts each line to a maximum of three words. The extremely generous spacing, coupled with the brevity of the lines, renders the quotation of a representative piece impossible in the space at our disposal. It must be conceded, however, that the type is eminently legible, and the volume may be unreservedly recommended to the myopic.

A reprehensible reactionary tendency may be detected in the dotting of the i's and the consecutive numbering of the pages.

A Contrast

In marked contrast is Mr. Sydney Bell, a poet with (or about) whom Irish readers should be more nearly concerned. His "Ten Irish Love Songs," unnecessarily but attractively produced by the Talbot Press, place him at once as an unregenerate Traditionalist. After a sketchy tour of Morocco it is pleasant to find ourselves transported, in Mr. Bell's pages, to Cloothna-Bare, Knocknaree, Dromahaire, and the "Lake Isle of Innisfree." We have been over this ground before. The all too familiar land-marks stimulate him to the expression of an indefinite mood of nostalgia, known abroad as the Celtic Note. In his anxiety to give an unmistakably Irish flavour to his work Mr. Bell indulges in orthographical lapses, such as "undher," "betther," "beyont." The words will be recognised without much difficulty as "under," "better," "beyond." The poems are informed by a vague amorous emotion, the sentiments being generally favourable to things Irish. The following is a fair specimen:

Young Kitty, she whispered: "A ghrádhaim tha"!
When I kissed her undher the tree;
An' divil another word she'd say,
But her eyes were as blue as the flowers in May,
And that was enough for me,
Says I!
More than enough for me!

Me, too.

Emotional Chaos

Whether it would be enough for Miss Doris Kerman is another question. For the vague and diffused eroticism of Mr. Bell's work is small beer to the emotional chaos which struggles for expression in her handsomely-published volume, "My Other Heart." So anxious is she to prove the tumultuousity of her feelings that she overbids, so to speak. Not content with calling a spade a spade, she invariably calls it Two Hearts:

However tender, or strong, our love is now . . . my dear
When e'er you wish to break the tie, that holds us now together,
Come and tell me . . . swear . . . and talk awhile . . . no fear
That I shall hold your dead love in my hand . . . ah, never,
Never, my beloved.

The majority of the pieces in the volume are on an even more hectic plane, and so do not lend themselves to quotation. However, the nature of Miss Kerman's talent and the strength of her creative urge may be adequately judged from these lines, which occur in a poem entitled "The Song of Solomon":—

Lost without the other . . . as a ship without a sail,
Surely, dear, that can never be our doom.
We have but youth, that's barely in its bloom,
So to you, love, with my life I implore
We love the other, more and more, and more.

The range of her sensitivity is wide; from the above lines we turn to the vituperative poem addressed to "W. G.":

MR. WALTER DE LA MARE.

You—lower than the lowest rat . . .
Pig eyed . . . and bloated like a fish.
King of Dogs,
King of Hogs,
So I think of you,
. . . W. G.

May you rot in hell . . . and soon
Uncovered by the sweetness of the sod.
You . . . the maddest
Sadist,
W.G.

This is one of the two pieces in the book which are not love poems. The other is entitled "The thoughts of a Russian peasant having murdered his wife."

Mr. de la Mare

Among such company Mr. de la Mare, needless to say, stands out clearly as an accomplished technician, though we believe his reputation to be quite out of proportion to his poetic achievement. "Peacock Pie," "with eighty-one little pictures in colour by Jocelyn Crowe," is a reprint of a volume first published in 1913. Since that year it has been re-issued on numerous occasions, and has helped to gain for its author a virtual monopoly in the "whimsy" business, a niche as the chronic Peter-Pantheist of contemporary English literature. This edition is beautifully produced, the colour-drawings being uniformly appropriate. To the jaundiced eye of the adult these verses must seem deplorably slight, but we have no doubt that every intelligent child will discover here something to amuse him.

New Novels

Inhale and Exhale. By William Saroyan. Faber. 7/6 net.

MR. SAROYAN is an Armenian, who began life in New York by selling newspapers as a small boy. His privations have coloured his outlook upon life. He is sensitive to the loneliness and misery that form part of life to so intense a degree that it is often actually painful to read him. "Inhale and Exhale" is a collection of short stories, but many of the pieces in this book are pure autobiography. The first part has a note of sheer despair. The emptiness and uselessness of life are stressed in long repetitive sentences, like: ". . . . standing there and crying because they wouldn't even smile back at him, and, for all he cared, the whole world could just fall into the darkness and end, and Jake could be dead and his wife could be dead, and all the streets and houses and people and rivers and meadows and sky could end, and there would be nobody anywhere . . . ." Then come some stories which are very amusing, indeed, and the book finishes with some notes which Mr. Saroyan made during a European tour. It is a profoundly disturbing book, this, although one is tempted to think that existence cannot really be as bad as all that.

The Fool and the Traitor. Lennox Kerr. Collins. 7/6 net.

Such men as Anthony Fletcher always have made, and will continue to make, good heroes, because they cherish the dreams which all who are young cherish of disinterested devotion to a cause, whether abstract or concrete. To Anthony at first the selling of duplicators was as good a cause as any other, provided he could believe fervently enough in his machines. Once the first flush of enthusiasm pales, he has to seek elsewhere for inspiration. Anthony Fletcher takes to the sea, to the bush, to sheep-farming, in his quest for a goal worthy of his dreams. We leave him embarking on yet another, and we are left with the impression that contentment can only come to the real fool who stops striving.

Cards on the Table. By Agatha Christie Collins. 7/6 net.

EXTREME neatness of construction is seldom absent from Mrs. Christie's Poirot stories, and in this, her detective's latest adventure, she contrives once again to give the detective story the exquisite finish of a highly-wrought classical work of art. A wealthy sensualist conceives the idea of a dinner party at which the guests are four persons whom he believes to be murderers, and four persons whose trade is the solving of crimes and secret investigations. The dinner takes place, and the host is very properly murdered. One of the two men and two women who have been invited as murderers must have committed the crime, and it is left for Poirot to discover which of them it is. The story is, therefore, of the "closed" type, and the deduction is a matter of pure psychology and the grey cells of M. Poirot. His solution leads at the end to one of the most genuinely dramatic situations which the detective story has produced for a long time. This is a book to be recommended muchly, for within the limits deliberately imposed by its construction it has that completely satisfying quality which we must call perfection.

Cross-Double-Cross. By Lewis Masefield. Putnam. 7/6 net.

In Mr. Masefield's first novel is to be found a surprisingly large number of the faults which first novels are liable to contain. His characters, firstly, are distinguishable solely by name, and not by nature. Apart from the more spectacular personalities involved one cannot decide who is what. Secondly, the mechanism of the novel creaks aloud in every joint. The continuity is achieved only by clumsy phrases like "on the next day . . . three days afterwards . . . during the voyage . . . while the voyage was in progress." Thirdly, Mr. Masefield has attempted to write something that is pure fantasy in a straight narrative style. The story actually deals with an armament manufacturer who lives on an aerodrome floating in the Atlantic, and there are revolutions in England against a Socialist Government, with a female Press magnate, who runs her own navy, involved; but the subject is miles beyond Mr. Masefield's powers. He is like a schoolboy writing about adventures on Mars for the fourth form magazine. This kind of thing needs to be done with extreme conviction if it is to be entertaining, and not merely absurd.

Blue Silver. By Victor Bridges. Hodder and Stoughton. 7/6 net.

WE depend on Victor Bridges for a joyous romantic story, and he excels himself in his latest. The hero is thrown out of work on suspicion of roguery, by the craft of an unknown foe; this happens just when he was off to the Thames estuary to go boating in the craft which always appears, full of salty glamour, in Mr. Bridges's yarns. He finds a lassie who is mixed up in the same web of mysterious intrigue. If it was not for her excessive habit of being knocked on the head, chased by a released wild bull, attacked by a poisonous serpent, and so on, we would like this girl. The usual lovable rogues, who crack cribs for honest reasons when they find an honest master, come to the aid of this much-menaced pair; but what is their chief piece of luck is that the local publican has given the hero half a share in an Irish Sweep ticket, which draws the outsider, Blue Silver. We listen, in the pub, to the broadcast description of the Derby, and recognise the fruity sportsman's voice which we heard in life last June. What comes of it all?—we will not spoil a tale crammed with laughing adventure by revealing more. This is a jewel among modern novels.

Henry Airbubble. By W. J. Turner. Dent. 7/6 net.

Mr. Turner's "Blow for Balloons" was hailed as "a most brilliant and witty extravaganza." Here is the sequel, wherein Henry Airbubble tells of his adventures in Germany, Italy, France and England, and it seems to be much the same kind of brilliant, witty piece of writing. To us it would appear that one either finds oneself at once in tune with Mr. Turner, and enjoy his startling originality, his humour, and his vast erudition, or else, being unable to catch the step, abandons him after a painful struggle. This book is difficult to read. Mr. Turner frequently uses sentences of great length, and he is sparing with his punctuation marks. In one sentence there may be four or five separate and distinct ideas—each one of them with extensive implications of its own. Then one comes upon a sentence like: "Henry could not speak: for he was lost in passionate contemplation of the extraordinary beauty of these crystallographic formations enjoying not only their structure and their relationship, but also their continual transacting and transformation—the birth and generation, as if in georama, of a spatial universe in crystalline symmetry." Perhaps, Mr. Turner mocks at the language of science; perhaps he would show his learning, perhaps crystallographic formations are indeed beautiful. We believe that few will be able to decide the answer.

Forty Centuries Look Down. By F. Britten Austin. Thornton Butterworth. 7/6 net.

MR. BRITTEN AUSTIN follows up his success with the Napoleonic novel, "The Road to Glory," with another novel drawn from another episode in the life of his hero. In this case he is concerned with Napoleon's adventure during the Egyptian campaign and the event which proved the crisis in his love for Josephine. As before, this author devotes himself to an honest presentation of Bonsparte as he conceives him after very real research. Readers may like or dislike, agree or disagree, but they cannot question Mr. Austin's sincerity.

The Fun of Football

Entertainment and Instruction

The Game Goes On. Edited by Captain H. B. T. Wakelam. London: Barker. 15/- net.
Rugby Football. By Captain H. B. Wakelam. London: Dent. 6/- net.

"THE Game Goes On" is as lively, as variegated, and as exciting as the sport which is its subject. Captain Wakelam has asked thirty-one Rugby authorities to write something of the game, and the diversity of their contributions will delight both the fanatic, and the man, or indeed, woman, who has but an elementary interest in it. Mr. O. L. Owen, in the beginning, tells the history of Rugby football, how it developed from a major infantry engagement into the highly scientific contest that it is to-day; how, in 1823, players and spectators were surprised and disgusted to see a wretched boy called Ellis pick the ball up in his hands, and run like fury with it in the direction of the opposing goalposts; and how the "roaring charges of the Irish forwards" won the championship for their country three times in six seasons.

Sound and Fury

Then Mr. E. B. Osborn, with his individual humour, praises the sheer violence of Rugby, and describes American football as a game played "in lethal spasms"; while in the next article Mr. Leo Munro gives some vivid and laconic pen pictures of football giants of the immediate past. Here is our own "Ernie" Crawford—"safe, clever, artful, a solemn-looking, darkly chuckling humorist . . . a crouching 'mesmerist,' who attracted the ball, kicked sky-high, down to his sure embrace; who magnetised unwary opponents to destruction, even, so it is said, by calling on them to pass, and exacting obedience, when they had no such intention." Then there are descriptions of actual matches by men who won immortal glory in them; there are a number of wildly amusing pages on the subject of "What's Wrong with Modern Rugby"; Captain Wakelam gives the inside story of some of his famous running commentaries; and later there are profound observations on the lot of the referee. We believe that even if you knew nothing about the game this book would keep you chuckling gently throughout a whole dreary winter's night.

How it is Played

In the second book Captain Wakelam has prepared a work of instruction and reference that should be of heaven-sent assistance to anybody who is concerned to teach the game to schoolboys, or adult clubs. He writes of the main idea of the modern game, its rules, its government, its administration, its tactics, and its essential arts. He shows how it should be played by a series of slow-motion action pictures, and it is an example of its ingenuity and thoroughness that he shows the place kick and drop kick so that the pictures go from left to right across the page. The player thus seems almost to move up to the ball before one's eyes. Finally there are chapters on training, dress, captaincy, team and club duties, with a compact historical story from the beginning of the game at Rugby School in 1823 until the present day.

Modern Photography

Modern Photography, 1936-7: in Colour and Monochrome. Edited by C. G. Holme. London: "The Studio." Wrappers, 3/- net; cloth, 7/6 net.

THE latest edition of "Modern Photography" maintains a consistently high level, but there are few or no outstanding pictures in it. From almost every point of view the best photograph is that of a nude "Athlete of Martinique," by Pierre-Adam, of Paris; but Bloch and Clausen's "Twilight," showing two spades against the sky, is very telling, and The Times' double-page picture of "The 'Yankee' off Southend" conveys a magnificent sense of movement. Walter Bird's portrait of Miss Stella Moya is admirably arranged to show what colour-photography and its reproduction on the page can do. There is little landscape work of the formerly familiar, "straight" kind, and the close-up portraits are inclined to be ordinary; but there is more than enough first-class stuff in other fields throughout the edition to entitle it to a place among its excellent predecessors from "The Studio" presses.

It is worth mentioning that the technical details attached to the various pictures are more than usually full. But ought not "1 a.m. on a dull day" in the data for Karl Sandels's "Fire!" to read simply "1 a.m."?

A Home in Biskra

Arab Interlude. By Clare Sheridan. London: Nicholson and Weston. 15/- net.

MRS. SHERIDAN, to appease in some degree her insatiable appetite for adventure, went to Biskra, built herself a house, and lived as an Arab among the Arabs. She makes, however, no startling revelations. Mutatis mutandis she might be writing of life in an English village. There is a long account of how the house was built, and of what the builders said and did, and of what the builders' mothers, fathers, sisters, wives and brothers said about the builders. It is all most domestic, and, after one has absorbed the initially novel facts about the Arabs, just a shade tedious. Mrs. Sheridan loves these people. They are her friends, and to write of them, to recall the pleasure and pain of her life amongst them, must have given her enjoyment. But the fact remains that the citizens of Biskra potentially are meagre entertainment. Now and then they assault one another with knives, and indulge in unorthodox love affairs; but in the long run they are very much the same as the citizens of any other provincial town. If Mrs. Sheridan had reported their doings less accurately, and more humorously or imaginatively, her Arabian interlude would have more attraction for people who were not there themselves to see.

St. Paul's Wanderings

Mr. H. V. Morton's New Book

In the Steps of St. Paul. By H. V. Morton. London: Rich and Cowan. 7/6 net.

"IN the Steps of St. Paul" will be a popular book among the millions of the Bible-reading public, and it will be read, if cursorily, for literary and scientific purposes. It is a comparison of "now" with "then." In an unusual way, it is mentally exciting because of facts so recently gathered, and because of comments and conjectures made on the spot in relation to circumstances and conditions that obtained in these places when visited by St. Paul. The author gives graphic pictures of the wonderful venture of the Apostle into the pagan world, and then, with intimate and amusing detail, he illustrates the same places in the decayed environment of our own time. There is reverent admiration of the great missionary and of his work throughout this book, but, at the same time, it is a very pleasant, highly circumstantial, usefully informed travel book through the vast area comprehended in following St. Paul from the Holy Land through Syria, Greece and Italy to Rome.

Before the Gospels

St. Paul preached Christianity without the Bible. As Mr. Morton says: "This greatest of all missionaries had not read the Gospels, for they had not been written in his time . . . his knowledge of the words and deeds of Jesus Christ came not from documents, but from the lips of St. Peter and those who accompanied Our Lord during His Ministry." "He would have been astonished had he known that his letters would be cherished for centuries, and eventually incorporated in the New Testament." "The fact that the letters were written before any of the four Gospels is not, perhaps, generally appreciated, because the scholars who produced the Authorised Version of our Bible in the reign of James I. did not arrange the New Testament in the order in which it was written," says the author in the beginning of his book, and, at the end, gives an acceptable chronology of St. Paul's life, with approximate dates of his Epistles. Discarding the Epistle to the Hebrews as not of Pauline authorship, he writes a careful statement of how the other Epistles came to be penned.

Tarsus, in which St. Paul took pride, is at this day sunk tragically low, a collection of tenements and slums so bad that Mr. Morton would have been glad to escape from it. He asks, however, "is it any less deplorable than those houses in the slums of Dublin, which, until the dealers became aware of them, contained Adam mantelpieces and ceilings blackened by a century's dust?"

The book is illustrated with a number of fine photographs.

A Prince of Robbers

Jonathan Wild's Story

Jonathan Wild: Prince of Robbers. By Frederick J. Lyons. London: Michael Joseph. 15/- net.

OPEN these pages and step back to the world of olden melodrama, penny plain and twopence coloured! The drawings of old London and the lurid descriptions that accompany them are setting for the crimes of transpontine tragedy. Though the author tells his story like a novel, and reminds us of Harrison Ainsworth, there is a painstaking account of social conditions, especially in their criminal aspect, which has distinct value. We inevitably recall Macaulay's famous pen picture of Stuart London.

Geographical Handkerchiefs

There are the coffee houses, which Charles II. tried to suppress as centres of sedition; they sprung up like mushrooms after the Great Fire. They had their rules of conduct, highly elaborate and wise. They were Everyman's home from home, and the ganglions of the news service. Every house had its sign, often well painted and costly, so that a street was a gallery of pictures in oils. Commerce had its homely enterprises. "You blew your nose on a handkerchief printed with a map of the English roads, the text of the Queen's latest speech, or a reproduction of the solar system."

The hero, if we may describe a villain so, who moves through the dark scene, by the wharves and tributary streams of the Fleet Ditch, is a figure of villainy which would seem improbable in a tale by Edgar Wallace. This Wild was king of the unsavoury underworld and something of a sardonic wit. His career, therefore, makes a tale of grimly fascinating horror. In an American gangster's life, we fancy, there is no such art of the macabre.

Architectural Horrors

Progress at Pelvis Bay. By Osbert Lancaster. London: Murray. 3/6 net.

PELVIS BAY, a mere hamlet until the opening of the nineteenth century, has developed since then into one of the more nauseating English seaside resorts. The story of its development, "in which the authorities have always striven to avail themselves of all that was best in contemporary art," is the quaint conceit which has produced this little book. If it finds its way into the hands of town councils or shopkeepers with grandiose ideas of rebuilding it may have a salutary effect, but whether or not, it should be found an amusing squib by readers who already are only too familiar with the horrors which bad taste and lack of plan can produce in a rising town. By far the best things in the book are the drawings of the Pelvis buildings at various stages; the legend which accompanies them is a little heavy in its satire.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1936.

NEWS SUMMARY

IRELAND

The evidence in the Boyle murder trial was concluded yesterday, and the judge will sum up to-day.—(Page 5.)

A deputation of Fine Gael deputies waited on the Minister for Agriculture in Dublin yesterday to point out the disabilities under which the Irish horse-breeding industry labours and to ask for the removal of the penal tariffs, or, alternatively, their equivalent in bounties.—(Page 9.)

ABROAD

There was a violent scene in the French Chamber yesterday over the debate regarding M. Salengro's military record. Blows were exchanged, about fifty deputies being involved in the melée.—(Page 9.)

SPORTING

At Liverpool yesterday Young England won the Liverpool Autumn Cup.—(Page 12.)

FINANCIAL

London Stock Markets closed the old account on a cheerful note, but the day's business was not large. Gilt-edged securities improved, and there was bright spots among Industrials and Mines.—(Page 14.)

The Treasury bill rate was lower at 10s. 7½d. per cent., compared with 11s. 0½d. per cent. last week. Gold rose to 142s. 7½d. per oz. and £322,000 in bars was sold.—(Page 14.)

Dublin Market was busy, with Banking issues and Grand Canal Ord. higher. Guinness units rose to 146s. 9d. Rails were firm.—(Page 14.)

The Irish Horse

Perhaps not one of the most remunerative, but certainly one of the most famous, industries of Ireland is her breeding of bloodstock. How many of the great racehorses of the past and present have been bred on Irish plains; and how few, when their pedigree is traced back, prove to be without trace of Irish blood! To-day the industry is in grave danger. We print elsewhere a memorandum which was presented by a number of Dáil deputies yesterday to the Minister for Agriculture, in the hope that the facts therein enumerated might induce him to take immediate steps for the industry's relief. Only a few years ago the horse-breeding industry was in a flourishing condition. Thousands of animals were purchased from the home sales by British and foreign experts; thousands more were exported for sale in Great Britain and other lands. Even when the economic depression hit these islands, reducing British purchases, the excellent quality of Irish horses still commanded high prices. During the last two or three years, however, the British tariffs on Irish livestock have created a sorry change. Under the influence of a 20 per cent. tariff, the export of bloodstock from the Free State has fallen by nearly 50 per cent., and prices have dropped to a dangerously low level. The industry, in a word, is faced with ruin. It is becoming almost impossible for Irish owners to enter their animals at English race meetings; for few of them can afford to pay the import duty on a highly-valued beast—but English owners, on the other hand, can compete without any handicap at Irish meetings. Much of the excellent advertisement which the exploits of the Free State Army's jumping team have afforded throughout the world is annulled by the waning prestige of the Irish horse—which is no fault either of the horse or of its breeder, but of a quarrel between Governments.

The deputation that visited Dr. Ryan yesterday urged one of two courses. It asked that he should use his offices either to have the British duties removed or that he should grant a countervailing bounty on the export of horses. The members pointed out that nothing has been gained by the reduction of the duties, in accordance with last year's trade pact with England, from 40 per cent. to 20 per cent.; for the Free State Government immediately removed the existing bounty, and the breeders were no better off than before. We hope that Dr. Ryan will give ear to the plea; for an industry of such age and reputation must not be allowed to die. We hope, at the same time, that he will adopt the wiser course. If a bounty will assist the breeders let them have a bounty by all means; but we must not forget that it will be paid by the Free State taxpayer. How much more sensible it would be to make a proper arrangement with the British Government for the removal of the duties. Nobody believes that the British people, who are devoted to horses and horse-racing, and are anxious to get the best bloodstock in the world for their own stables, wish to exclude Irish horses, or to allow the Irish industry to be ruined. The removal of the duties ought to be a simple matter of accountancy: Great Britain could abolish her tariff on Irish horses, and the Free State, in return, could allow a counter-balancing trade concession to British manufacturers. It is true that the United Kingdom and the Free State are not in the same position as any two nations which discriminate in trading matters against each other: it is a point of honour and of necessity with Great Britain that she must collect a certain sum from the Free State every year by way of tariffs to offset her loss on the land annuities Yet, so long as Britain obtains this sum, it does not matter to her whether she obtains it from duties on bloodstock or on boot-laces. Surely the tariffs can be manipulated in such a manner that the bloodstock industry will cease to be a chief sufferer.

Best of all would be a common-sense movement to end the economic war—which automatically would save the horse-breeders. At the present moment there is every sign of good feeling between the Free State and Great Britain. We would not place immense importance on the current rumours that "feelers" are being extended behind the scenes; for such rumours are of periodical occurrence, and have come to little in the past. Nevertheless, it is probable that President de Valera's promise to retain the Commonwealth bond for the time being has created a good impression across the Channel, and the interchange of courtesies between the Lord Mayors of Manchester and Dublin may not be without effect. Two Labour members will suggest to the House of Commons next week that the time is opportune for an improvement of Anglo-Irish relations, and there is no reason to suppose that anything but a favourable—if guarded—answer will be received. A protestation of friendship in Dáil Eireann would help to stimulate these evidences of better feeling. We have urged time and again that the countries are separated merely by trifles. President de Valera's new Constitution—so far as it has been revealed to the public—represents the limit to which he can attain in the way of independence for the present; and it does not appear to have been greeted with any particular disfavour across the Channel. If its publication permits of a truce on the political issues, surely the economic differences can be settled without loss of countenance on either side. A compromise on the subject of the land annuities would bring the economic war to an immediate end, and at once a new trade agreement, while recognising the Free State's need to protect her infant industries, could arrange for a profitable flow of commerce across the Irish Sea. It is all wrong that two nations should suffer heavy loss for the sake of a few million pounds a year.

Changes in Italy

While Count Ciano is making a kind of triumphal progress through the capitals of Central Europe, all sorts of rumours are being circulated in Rome. It seems that Signor Mussolini is contemplating sweeping changes in the Italian State, involving not only his own position, but also that of a number of important personages from the King down. Since the annexation of Abyssinia there has been considerable difficulties in diplomatic circles regarding the title of the Italian King. Signor Mussolini, in his light-hearted way, invented the title of "King of Italy and Emperor of Ethiopia," ignoring the fact that Italy's position in Abyssinia could not be recognised by any of the so-called sanctionist Powers which still remained faithful to the Covenant of the League of Nations. For this reason France has been unable to send a new Ambassador to Rome, and almost every Chancellery in Europe has been embarrassed. In these circumstances, it is stated that Signor Mussolini is about to make several changes in Italian titles. The King of Italy will become "Emperor of the Italian Empire," a title which will be sufficiently harmless to satisfy almost everybody. Signor Mussolini himself will become Chancellor of the Empire, with Count Ciano immediately beneath him; and there will be several other changes in nomenclature of greater or less importance. The Chamber of Deputies, which already is virtually powerless, will be replaced by a corporative body entitled the Chamber of Fascisti and Corporations, and the entire political organisation of the Italian State will be remodelled on corporative lines. Possibly the most interesting piece of Roman gossip concerns Marshal Balbo. This dashing officer formerly was Signor Mussolini's bosom friend. He was mainly responsible for the creation of the Italian Air Force, which, by general consent, is now among the finest of its type in the world; and when in 1933 the formation flight across the Atlantic was planned in Rome, Balbo was chosen to lead it. He visited this country at that time, winning golden opinions everywhere; and when eventually he returned to Italy he was given a reception which could not have been more enthusiastic if he had been the Duce himself. This reception disturbed Signor Mussolini's peace of mind. He saw in the young and vigorous Balbo a possible rival to himself in popularity, and, being like the Turk—unable to bear a brother near his throne—decided to kick Marshal Balbo, as it were, upstairs. Accordingly, he removed the Marshal from the post of Minister for Air, which he took over himself, and appointed him as Governor of Libya—an apparent promotion, which, in fact, simply meant exile from Rome. Now, it seems, something has happened to change the situation; for the Duce has decided—or so rumour has it—to appoint Marshal Balbo as Ambassador to Berlin, and to replace him in Libya by Signor Starace, who for some time past has been Secretary-General of the Fascist Party. This announcement has caused considerable surprise; for not so very long ago one of the Nazi newspapers declared that Marshal Balbo was a Jew. If this statement should happen to be true, Marshal Balbo hardly would be persona grata in Berlin, and the further development of the situation will be awaited with interest. All these rumours of change suggest that Signor Mussolini is dissatisfied with the existing condition of affairs. He is more than anxious to make friends again with Britain and France, and is beginning to realise at this late hour that even Fascist Italy cannot hope to stand by herself in the Europe of to-day.

A School for Servants

There was talk some time ago of a central School of Domestic Economy, in which Irish girls might learn the arts of cooking and of general housekeeping—arts in which they are notoriously unpractised. From the lack of news concerning any such institution, we gather that the plan has come to nothing. Nevertheless, if the Government has thought the matter of no importance, local bodies have not been idle. It appears that for a year past the Clare Vocational Education Committee has been concerning itself with an excellent project for the training of girls in every aspect of hotel work. Last winter the Committee rented a hotel at Lisdoonvarna, one of the most popular resorts on the west coast, and gave practical and thorough training in every branch of domestic economy to twenty-nine girls. The experiment was justified; for, at the close of their period of training, the girls were offered jobs in Ireland at the same rate of remuneration which they would have obtained for similar duties across the Channel. More applications, indeed, were received than could be filled. The news is pleasant for two reasons. It shows, in the first place, that our native hotels are ready to employ Irish girls—and to employ them on good terms—if the girls can acquire the necessary degree of training. In the second place, it shows that our holiday resorts—or one of them, at least—have awakened to the need of skilful attendance for visitors. If this example from Clare finds imitators, an end will be made of the untidy "Bridgets" who used to bring derision upon Irish hotels in the bad old days: there certainly will be no further room for jokes about the girl who strained the coffee through an old sock. We compliment the Clare Committee. It has done exceedingly useful work for the whole country's benefit, and we have little doubt that it has set a headline for the remaining twenty-five counties. The Free State is sadly lacking in skilled labour, and anyone—whether individual or institution—who tries to train the untaught is doing a national service.

Falling Population

The danger of a falling population seems to have penetrated Great Britain's consciousness. A Population Investigation Committee, graced by many celebrated names, has been set up to ascertain the precise extent of the decline thus far, and Committee proposes, first, to survey England's social history since 1870—the year in which the decline began—and to analyse its findings. It hopes thereby to discover how far child-bearing is affected by locality, and by conditions of employment: whether, for example, country-dwellers are more or less fertile than town-dwellers, manual labourers than "brain-workers," and so on. On the basis of these findings, it may be possible, if the need becomes urgent, so to re-plan the nation's industrial and agricultural systems as to check the decline and convert it into an increase. Another symptom of Great Britain's anxiety is shown by some of the provisions of the new Marriage Bill for the reform of the divorce laws, which was introduced into Parliament this week. This bill, on the one hand, extends the grounds for divorce in cases where marriages have "irreparably collapsed," and so would seem to make divorce easier. On the other hand, it proposes to allow no divorce within a period of five years from the date of the marriage. This proposal, in our view, is sound: for there has been a growing tendency among the British upper classes to copy the American practice of marrying impulsively, giving "double harness" a brief trial, and then getting a divorce and repeating the process. Such a practice can only bring the institution of marriage into contempt, and the result must be reflected in a falling birth-rate. We sympathise with the British in this new concern of theirs. It is inevitable that, when the peoples of so many other nations are growing rapidly, they should be alarmed by the sapping of their people's vitality.

HORSE-BREEDING IN PERIL

HEAVY FALL IN EXPORTS AND LOWER PRICES

DEPUTATION TO MINISTER FOR AGRICULTURE

PLEA FOR REMOVAL OF BRITISH PENAL DUTIES

THE great importance of the horse-breeding industry, and the disabilities under which it labours, were strongly represented to Dr. Ryan, Minister for Agriculture, by a deputation of Fine Gael deputies, who waited on him for that purpose yesterday.

The decline in the net exports of horses in recent years, amounting to almost 50 per cent., was pointed out, a fact which, it was stated, was in the main due to the penal tariffs. As a result of these tariffs British owners could enter horses in Irish races, free from tariff, while Irish owners entering in British races were liable to pay 20 per cent. tariff, often on a high valuation.

It was absolutely necessary, the deputation stated, for the future of Irish horse-breeding that the penal tariffs should be removed, or, alternatively, that equivalent bounties should be paid.

The deputation urged that in the matter of income tax on stallions' fees the Irish breeder should be placed in the position of the English breeder. Under present arrangements the Irish breeder has to pay on the double.

The successes of the Army jumping team had made the reputation of the Irish horse known abroad, but, as most of the trade in horses was done with Great Britain, the advantage of this advertisement was largely lost owing to the penal tariffs.

Minister's Promise

Dr. Ryan promised to give the fullest consideration to the facts as represented to him.

The deputation, which was headed by Mr. Cecil Lavery, K.C., T.D., included the following deputies—Messrs. Richard Curran, W. Desmond, R. Holahan, C. Fagan and George Bennett, all of whom are interested in one aspect or other of the horse-breeding industry.

DEPUTATION'S MEMORANDUM

The deputation put their case before the Minister in the form of a long memorandum, in which they called particular attention to the information regarding the industry as published in Government publications, which, in their view, gave cause for grave anxiety.

"The revenue from bloodstock depends," the memorandum stated, "to a very large extent on the export trade, along with the earnings provided by racecourses in this country. Sales and purchases by Irish owners or producers in this country may be described generally as transfers of ownership within the industry. Wealthy owners of racehorses and stud farms are few in numbers.

"The fall in value of the export trade in horses during the last four years is very serious matter for bloodstock producers and employés. However serious—and we do not in any way minimise its seriousness—it would not be so dangerous if it were certain that the superior, the outstandingly superior, quality of the Irish horse was assured and was being maintained. That is, in our judgment, the important, as well as the dominating, factor. We realise our responsibility in putting on record anything which might be taken as an indication that we were not satisfied that the superior quality of Irish horses is being maintained. But we also realise that it is our responsibility and duty to indicate any, as well as every, cause which militates against the maintenance of the supremacy and superiority of Irish horses.

BREEDERS' MAIN PURPOSE

"As in all other phases of industrial activity, in the horse-breeding industry the main purpose of breeders, who comprise the vast majority of those engaged in it, must be to balance their accounts on the right side—if the industry is to be maintained at full production.

"We realise, of course, the fact that some Irish breeders are not concerned with bloodstock raising purely from the remunerative point of view. Such breeders are a national asset. The pity of it is that there are few so independent and capable of being so financially disinterested."

Tabulated figures submitted showed that imports of horses in 1928-31 numbered 15,958, valued at £4,924,136, while the total exports 1929-31 were 44,180, valued at £9,106,166. The net exports, therefore, in 1929-31 were £4,182,030.

The total imports in 1932-35 were 6,246, valued at £1,961,113, and the exports 42,949, valued at £4,120,897. The net exports thus amounted to £2,159,784.

FIFTY PER CENT. DECLINE

The memorandum proceeds to point out that, while in the four years 1928-31 the net receipts or net exports amounted in value to £4,182,030, the value during the subsequent four-year period fell to £2,159,784—a decline of nearly 50 per cent. This is a very serious matter, and represents an average loss to the country of over £500,000 annually.

"Admittedly sales of horses in the years 1930 and 1931 show a considerable fall in receipts. But it has to be remembered that this fall was due to the economic depression in Great Britain in these two years. The imports during these years were maintained without any reduction in the capital value of the imported animals, which proved conclusively the belief of Irish breeders and owners and of British breeders in the excellence of Irish stud farms. It must also be remembered that in the next two-year-period 1932-1933 bloodstock prices in Great Britain showed distinct improvement, while the exports of Irish bloodstock continued to decline in value.

DISTURBING FEATURES

"To these receipts there should be added the value of stakes won by Irish owners in Ireland and elsewhere. It may be taken that for the past four years stakes won by owners outside of Ireland on Irish racecourses equate, and more than equate, winnings of Irish owners outside of Ireland. Revenue to Irish owners and breeders is confined to the total sum provided by stakes at Irish race meetings and the value of the exports over imports. We estimate the value of these stakes at £75,000 per annum. As there are between 1,000 and 2,000 horses in training and the value of the stakes provided for racehorses would no more than pay for the training and entering in races of 300 horses, the main source of income to Irish breeders and owners is derived from the export trade. Irish racecourses have their value and importance in many respects to owners and breeders—to the former in respect of discovering the value of the animals.

"There are two disturbing features of the bloodstock industry—the fall in the number of visiting and imported mares and the high percentage of yearlings sold at 50 guineas and under. We are not to be taken as accepting the value of the yearlings at this low figure, and, while not disputing the judgment of the buyers as a whole, it may be that better bargains were obtained at the small figure than many believed. The fact, however, is that such low prices do not pay the breeders.

IMPORTED ANIMALS

"It is little satisfaction to a breeder when, as often happens, a yearling sold by him at sales subsequently asserts his supremacy on the racecourse. If the breeder has kept the dam it may ensure him a bigger price for her progeny the following year.

"We have seen with much satisfaction in the returns of imports of stallions for the year 1935 a considerable rise in the prices of imported animals. That is all the more pleasing in view of the fact that some of the best stallions had been sent out of the country during the past three years. Breeders' difficulties in these circumstances were increased when they had to incur the expense of transport for breeding mares, or alter the mating in consequence.

"It is in our view indispensable to the horse-breeding industry that the quality of the thoroughbred sire in the country should be maintained, and that the best blood should be available to breeders at Irish stud farms.

THE PENAL TARIFFS

"British penal tariffs are responsible for the present plight of the horse-breeding industry in this country. On other agricultural live-stock the tariffs are imposed on each head of live-stock, varying in cases according to age. On horses they are imposed on an ad valorem valuation. Certificates of sales by Goff's in this country and Tattersall's in Great Britain are accepted by the British Revenue authorities as the value of the horses. In the purchases at Goff's the buyer on exporting to Great Britain pays the tariff; at Tattersall's the seller, Irish breeder or owner, pays.

"During the four years 1931 to 1934 (inclusive) Great Britain and Northern Ireland purchased 28,536 horses out of a total export of 43,109—almost 70 per cent. —and the value at £4,319,528 out of a total export of £5,032,290 for these four years constitutes over 80 per cent. of our cash receipts for horses.

THE FOREIGN PURCHASES

"The average prices paid for horses exported to Great Britain being higher than the non-British purchasers pay, there is no doubt that the ad valorem duties affect the prices paid by other buyers than British. It follows that foreign buyers purchase horses here at 20 per cent. below their value at the expense of Irish owners and breeders.

"Another effect of the British penal duties is that British owners and breeders can enter horses in Irish races, and have done so, free from any tariff, whereas Irish owners who enter horses in English races (if the animal has not been previously in Great Britain) are liable and have to pay the 20 per cent. tariff, usually on a high valuation, and there is no drawback. This impost amounts to a prohibition, except to wealthy owners, and even wealthy owners, who are few in number, must hesitate to incur such a heavy liability. The racecourse, being the place where a horse has to make his reputation, Great Britain as a venue is practically closed in consequence of the tariff to Irish owners, to the loss of Irish owners and to the loss of owners of horses racing here. Many Irish horses would be saleable were the competition between Irish-trained horses and British-trained horses not made prohibitive by the tariffs.

"Other countries are obtaining credit and reputation which ought to be ours.

AN ABSOLUTE NECESSITY

"These facts are sufficient to warrant considerable anxiety. In our view there is an absolute necessity to the future of horse-breeding in Ireland to have the ad valorem tariffs on horses removed. Alternatively, that bounties should be provided which would be the equivalent of the tariff. It would not cost more than the

NOT GREATLY ALARMED

HUNGARIAN RE-ARMAMENT

LITTLE ENTENTE "WILL TAKE STEPS"

HUNGARY'S claim to the right to re-arm, officially disclosed in the communiqué issued after the Italy-Hungary-Austria talks in Vienna, has not greatly alarmed the Little Entente States, says Reuter's Belgrade Correspondent.

Steps will be taken, it is understood, to ensure that eventual open re-armament by Hungary will have no adverse affect on the military situation of Rumania, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia—but nothing hasty will be done.

In well-informed circles in Hungary it is affirmed that no attempt to put her re-armament claim into practice is to be expected yet. The opinion is expressed there that the results of the Three-Power Conference at Vienna will help to build up the policy of European peace.

Meanwhile in Rumania, adds Reuter, the Departments of Aviation and Marine have been combined into a Ministry which is expected to make important expenditures in the near future. This amalgamation is regarded as another reply to recent Revisionist propaganda.

There is more and more talk in serious circles regarding the probability of calling a meeting at Bukharest of the Parliaments of the Little Entente.

RUMANIA'S NEW LAW

A new law, to which military importance is attached, is to be presented to the Rumanian Parliament immediately. Under this law all young men between the ages of 18 and 21 years will have to work for the State for twenty-five days each year on roads and other public works.

Fears that Hungary's re-armament claim will inevitably bring the re-armament of Bulgaria in its train is expressed in a section of the Paris Press. Incidentally, the Vienna Correspondent of the Matin, referring to the Three-Power Conference, declares:—

"If the tension between London and Rome had remained unrelaxed, the Fascist delegation would have urged decisions capable of forming the foundation of a vast Central European bloc, in which the influence of Germany and Italy would find mutual support."

Count Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister, had a tumultous welcome yesterday when he arrived in Budapest from Vienna with his wife, Signor Mussolini's daughter. A quarter of a million people thronged the beflagged streets as he drove through, and cries of "Italy and Revision" were raised.

service of these bounties in 1933 and 1934, and if the service were to cost more it would be money spent which would give a return far beyond the cost of the provision of the necessary money. In the negotiations which took place last year the British tariffs were reduced from 40 per cent. to 20 per cent., but as the bounty was withdrawn the change in the tariff conferred no benefit on the horse-breeding industry.

"Our concern is just as much with the other types of horses—steeplechasers, hunters, polo ponies, chargers, troopers, van and draught horses. Most of these types take their character, quality, stamina and good selling attributes from the quality of our bloodstock.

INCOME TAX

"We suggest that, in the interests of bloodstock breeding, the position with regard to income tax on stallions' fees should be brought into accord with the position in Great Britain.

"At present the anomalous situation is that under identical statutory provisions the owner of a stud farm in Great Britain discharges his entire income tax liability in respect of profits when he pays the Schedule B assessment, based on the valuation of the lands and buildings, while an owner of a similar farm in Ireland having paid his Schedule B assessment, is required to pay income tax on the profits from stallion fees under Schedule D. In a sense he is required to pay twice over. It is obvious that this places the owner of a stallion kept in Ireland at a great disadvantage towards his British competitor, and it is also obvious that it is an inducement to owners to found their stud farms in Great Britain, and to remove their stallions from this country."

The memorandum proceeded to deal with the number of successes of Irish-bred horses on the British racecourses in recent years—a record of which there was every prospect of a continuance in the present year. It also mentioned the attention which the Ministry of Defence had been giving to the Army Equitation School and the National Army jumping team.

THE ARMY HORSES

"Through the policy of sending the Army jumping team to compete at horse shows and in military jumping contests in different parts of the world," it states, "the reputation of Irish-bred horses has been widely spread. The quality of Irish horse-flesh has been not merely made known, but demonstrated to persons interested in the horse-breeding industry in many countries. The result has been to enhance the reputation of, and increase, the market for Irish hunters, chargers and troopers, in addition to benefiting our thoroughbred stock from the sales point of view. As, however, our principal export trade in horses is with Great Britain, and as that trade has been seriously damaged by the penal tariffs, the work of the Army jumping team is largely frustrated at present. Moreover, there are tendencies which, as we have pointed out, will seriously diminish the quality of Irish bloodstock if not checked. If a diminution of the quality of Irish bloodstock were to take place, the care, skill and expense devoted to the Army jumping team would have been almost entirely wasted.

"The reputation and the consistently high standard of excellence of Irish horse-flesh are national assets of the first importance. This memorandum is directed towards the removal of dangers which threaten the maintenance of those standards which have been built up in the past."

NEGOTIATION URGED

The deputation concluded by pressing for the speedy negotiation of the abolition of the British tariffs on Irish horses, or, alternatively, for the granting of a bounty from the Exchequer to counterbalance the present disastrous tariffs. The memorandum concludes:—

"The Irish bloodstock industry is too valuable and too great a national asset to be allowed to be endangered. The quality of our bloodstock must be maintained, any further reduction in its numbers prevented, and every effort made to remove the dangers threatening it, and to maintain the reputation it has justly earned in the face of the keenest competition."

"The Mollisons of Germany" are to undertake a long-distance flight, and thus compete with the English Mollisons, says Reuter. The "German Mollisons" are Berndt Rosemeyer, the racing motorist, and his wife, Elly Beinhorn, the well-known airwoman. Details of the flight will be announced shortly.

"BATTLE" OF DEPUTIES

FIFTY IN MELEE

FRENCH CHAMBER UPROAR

PRESIDENT'S MOVING APPEAL

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

PARIS, Friday.

BLACK eyes and bruised shins were suffered by deputies in the French Chamber to-day in a violent ten-minute "battle" of punches and kicks which developed during the debate on the military record of M. Salengro, Minister of the Interior. Even after the sitting was suspended by the President, M. Herriot, the floor continued to be jammed with vociferating deputies.

When political passions had returned sufficiently to normal to allow the sitting to be resumed, M. Herriot, a former Premier, in a moving appeal, reminded the House of the Armistice ceremonies, and remarked:

"Foreign countries will measure the moral strength of France by your behaviour here."

M. Salengro, who was recently vindicated at an official inquiry following allegations in the Press of cowardice in the Great War, was sitting next to the Defence Minister, M. Daladier, when the uproar broke out.

There was a look of calm determination on his face.

THE FIGHT STARTS

The fight started as M. Blum, the Premier, was about to speak. As he mounted the Tribune, right-wingers shouted: "The man who won the war is going to speak." The President ordered silence, but the hubbub increased.

Two deputies came to blows. Immediately there was uproar. Other deputies joined in. At last there were about 50 struggling on the floor of the Chamber. The fighters clambered over seats and desks and up and down the steps, and a number were knocked over and sprawled on to benches.

Ushers and peacemakers were involved in the fierce fray.

The blows ceased when the suspension was ordered. When everyone had been separated the Right-Wingers, giving the open-hand salute, began to sing the "Marseillaise." The Left-Wingers, holding up clenched fists, were only a few bars behind.

It was an incredible display.

"GO TO BARCELONA"

The atmosphere had been exceedingly tense from the start of the debate, with frequent interruptions from the Left, to which the Right rejoined with shouts of "Go to Barcelona."

Then came a motion by M. Becquart, who declared that M. Salengro was a revolutionary anti-militarist before the war. M. Herriot described the interpellation as a sorry affair for France.

The Chamber listened in almost religious silence to the Premier. Amid the cheers of standing deputies after he had finished M. Blum rushed up to M. Salengro and kissed him on both cheeks.

The Premier stressed that the whole campaign against the Minister was based on a clerical error in an orderly room as regards the date of the courtmartial, and on vicious hearsay evidence that there was a second courtmartial.

"There was, indeed, a second," declared M. Blum, "in which Salengro, a prisoner of war, was courtmartialled by Germany and sentenced to two years for refusing to work in a German foundry against France."

By an unusual procedure the resolution on which the Chamber afterwards voted was split in two—(1) condemning the inanity of the accusations against a member of the Government and the defamatory charges; and (2) expressing confidence in the Government to table a law protecting the liberty of the Press but preventing libel.

The first part of the resolution was carried by 472 votes to 103; the second, implying confidence in the Government, by 374 votes to 201.

THE ECONOMIC DISPUTE

EARLY ATTEMPT TO REACH SETTLEMENT

BY OUR POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT.

THE possibility of an early attempt to settle the dispute between the Irish Free State and Great Britain is at the moment the topic of speculation in various quarters in Dublin.

The hopes of the optimists appear to be based mainly on the speech which President de Valera made to the Fianna Fail Ard Fheis last week, and their argument is that now that the President has made it clear that he has no intention of leaving the British Commonwealth of Nations, until "the Irish people clearly make up their minds that they do not want present conditions to continue," one of the most serious difficulties disappears.

They further assume from the same speech that the President is willing to continue to associate with the Imperial Conference in all matters of common concern. His words in this regard were: "At the moment it is not our intention to change the existing relations, in so far as use is made of the same machinery by Canada, Australia and New Zealand in the field of external affairs." The word "machinery" is understood to refer to the Imperial Conference.

It is possible that too much is being read into the President's utterance, but however that may be, there is no denying that the prevailing opinion is that there exists a more favourable atmosphere than at any time in the last four years for another attempt to arrive at an understanding with the British Government on the matters outstanding between it and the Dublin Government.

The gesture made by the new Lord Mayor of Manchester has undoubtedly done much to crystallise this feeling, and for that reason there will be much interest in the reply to be given in the House of Commons next week to questions which are to be put to Ministers.

NOT SLICES OF CAKE

The problem of handing back to Germany her African pre-War colonies was discussed by Sir Edward Grigg, M.P. for Altrincham and a former Governor of Kenya Colony, when he spoke at the annual dinner of the Manchester Geographical Society last night.

"My own view," he said, "is that it would be quite wrong for this country simply to return to Germany her pre-War colonies in Africa. We were not entitled to treat Africa and the African people as a cake, of which slices could be handed out here and there."

REMARKABLE SLIGO PROBLEM

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

SLIGO, Friday.

REMARKABLE scenes were witnessed in Sligo to-day at the site of South Gallows Hill Corporation housing scheme as a result of some fifteen families moving into possession, during the night and early hours of this morning, of a number of the unfinished dwellings.

Nearly all of the occupants, who began their trek with scanty belongings immediately after the contractor's men had ceased work for the day, came from condemned houses in the Rope Walk and Mail Coach road, in the vicinity of South Gallows Hill.

When approached by the Civic Guards to-day they declined to give up possession, claiming that, although promised houses under the Corporation's previous schemes, they were turned down in each instance. In several cases the people spent the night without any bedding or furniture in rooms which have yet to be provided with windows and doors.

The contractor's men continued work, as usual, to-day, but the people in possession refused to vacate the premises.

Mr. Sean O'Higgins, Town Clerk, states that the Corporation have nothing whatever to do with the unusual situation, which is purely a matter for the contractor. The contractor has taken up the question with his solicitors, but it is understood that the problem can only be dealt with by the Circuit Court Judge.

A further complication arising from the incident is that several other residents, formerly occupiers of single rooms, have gone into possession of the vacant condemned houses.

FROM "THE TIMES"

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT.)

CANBERRA AND THE STATES

The Times in a leading article to-day says:—A decision given by the High Court of Australia on Wednesday has created a fresh constitutional embarrassment for the Commonwealth Government. The Court has ruled that the Air Navigation Act is invalid as exceeding the authority vested in the Federal Parliament. It is doubtful how far State legislation could provide for adequate control, and, in any case, uniform measures would take some time to pass. In the meantime, the aviation companies have agreed to observe the invalidated regulations, but the position is so anomalous that the Government have decided to ask the people to amend the Constitution by giving the Federal Parliament the explicit right to legislate upon air navigation and aircraft. This can be done by referendum, and the necessary bill was introduced on Thursday. As it is only proposed to take powers which most people thought the Commonwealth already possessed, there would seem to be no difficulty in securing agreement.

This, however, is far from being the case, The Times proceeds. Some of the State Governments, particularly those of the smaller States, are seriously alarmed over the growing preponderance of the Commonwealth Government, which seems to them to be steadily whittling away their rights. They are alarmed over the drift towards what one State Premier has described as unification by financial pressure. The present division of taxation powers leaves them without sufficient income to meet their expenditure, necessarily heavy, on education, police, railways, roads, and other local needs, while the Commonwealth Government have a superabundant revenue and comparatively few heavy expenses. They resent the financial dependence upon the Federal Treasury to which they are thus reduced. These grievances make them little disposed to favour any extension of Federal powers, however necessary they may appear.

BETWEEN RUSSIA AND GERMANY

POLAND A BULWARK OF PEACE

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

WARSAW, Friday.

The "great political significance" of the visit to London of Colonel Beck, the Polish Foreign Minister, is emphasised in newspaper comment here to-day.

The semi-official newspaper, Gazete Polska, says that world opinion rightly appreciates that the visit is an event of great political importance.

"This visit," it declares, "is a demonstration of the harmony between the ideas of Poland and Great Britain. It is particularly necessary to emphasise strongly the identity of the methods of Poland and England regarding the organisation of peace within the framework of the League of Nations and their attitude towards the Locarno question."

The newspaper notes with satisfaction the community of views between Poland and Great Britain in regard to the formation in Europe of opposing "blocs," and in regard to disputes between nations holding conflicting political theories.

The Kurjen Poranny refers to the coincidence of the visit of Colonel Beck to London with the Grand Military Review in Warsaw of the Polish Army, "which is a bulwark between the armies of two powerful nations, Germany and Russia."

The policy of Poland, it is declared, rejects all "crusades" on behalf of political theories which might upset the European balance.

TRANSATLANTIC AIR BASE WAGES

PROPOSED DEBATE IN THE DAIL

Notice of the following motion to be discussed in the Dail has been given in the names of Mr. Patrick Hogan (Lab., Clare) and Mr. Michael Keyes (Lab., Limerick):—

"That the Dail disapproves of the low rate of wages now paid to workers employed by the Commissioners of Public Works in connection with the construction of a Transatlantic air base at Rhynana, Newmarket-on-Fergus, Co. Clare."

A further warning to profiteering was uttered by Herr Joseph Wagner in a speech in Berlin yesterday, in which he explained his task as Reich Controller of Prices under Hitler's four years' plan. "Trade and industry must be subordinated to the requirements of national life," he said.

GOVERNMENT'S BIG ATTACK

FIFTY THOUSAND TROOPS IN ACTION

"END THE WEEK WITH A DECISIVE VICTORY"

MADRID DEFENCE COMMITTEE CLAIMS ADVANCE

FIFTY THOUSAND Spanish Government troops were hurled against the insurgents yesterday afternoon, in their first big counter-offensive since the siege of Madrid began.

The Government batteries in the suburbs stopped firing for fear of hitting their troops as they advanced. Aircraft went up to patrol the sunny skies over the capital and keep watch.

A wireless barrage was launched, calling on the insurgents to disobey their leaders "who, for the sake of material aid, have sold to foreigners part of the Spanish territory conquered by our ancestors."

The first success reported was the capture of two big guns.

The launching of the attack was announced to the public by the Madrid Defence Committee. "Our troops," the communiqué says, "are advancing slowly, but irresistibly. They are carrying out the plans of the high command. Our position is favourable."

General Miaja, Chief of the Defence Council, issued a stirring message to his troops before the attack. In it he ordered "the 50,000 Republican combatants at present in the lines" to attack, "so as to end the week with a decisive victory."

MOORS HELD AT BAY

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

MADRID, Friday.

To-day's offensive is a sequel to yesterday's fighting, when the Government forces definitely bettered their positions. Yesterday the Government succeeded in advancing two and a half miles in the Estremadura road sector, and an attack in the southern section of the suburb of Usera resulted in the capture of several guns, some of which had been dismounted in the hope of saving them.

Major Escobar's column also repulsed two sharp insurgent attacks supported by tanks.

The Asturian miners, who are now fighting on the Madrid front, are doing terrible damage with hand grenades, and also with their own home-made packets of dynamite, which they refuse to abandon for more orthodox weapons.

They have learned to throw the grenades and dynamite neatly under the caterpillar wheels of tanks.

The first insurgent counter-attack, which was repulsed, was carried out by six tanks, preceding two companies of Moroccans. It was broken up by Government hand-grenade throwers.

The second was led by four tanks, protecting thousands of Moroccans, but insurgent shock troops were apparently no match for the militia.

MADRID'S MORALE IMPROVES

REINFORCEMENTS FROM CATALONIA

FROM J. R. ALLWORK,

REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT IN MADRID.

Friday.

Up till this afternoon there had been a perceptible lull in the artillery bombardment by both sides. It seemed here that either the insurgent attack had been held up for some reason, or else, perhaps, their batteries had been damaged by Government aircraft.

Optimism in the capital has not been weakened, despite the almost continual bombardment of the past week, and the morale of the militia has improved vastly since they have found that the Moors and Foreign Legionaries are not invincible.

Reinforcements have been arriving in Madrid from Catalonia in the shape of a new column, which looks to be well equipped and of excellent morale. They marched through the streets of the city at dusk, singing the "Internationale" and cheering, to the acclamations of the people.

BRITONS INCLUDED

Another column was composed of anti-Fascists from nine different countries, including some Britons. This column has rendered valuable work in the Casa del Campo.

New war material recently arrived from abroad has also contributed to this morale.

Many of the shock police are armed with Italian Fraschini rifles, and with munitions made either in Turin or Bologna. They crack jokes about using "Fascist weapons to kill Fascists."

The main forces of the insurgents are now believed to be concentrated on the Toledo and Andalusia roads. It was along the first of these that they made their spectacular advance two weeks ago.

COULD HOLD OUT FOR YEAR

General Miaja has announced that Madrid could, in case of necessity, hold out for a year.

The tactical position of Madrid is rather strange, as the insurgents appear to be attacking with greatest pressure on the roads most difficult to force. On the Toledo road, from Getafe to the city itself, there are houses, dykes, encampments and aerodromes, all of which can be, and are, used as small fortresses, involving street-to-street fighting. This would account for the frequency of the insurgent air raids in this part of the town.

I visited one of these advance posts on the Casa de Campo to-day, and was able to see for myself what a difficult job it would be to attack on this line with any success.

An advance could be made fairly easily through the wooded Casa de Campo itself, which offers excellent cover; but there is a large open space to be crossed after that, which is completely dominated by the Government machine-guns, while specially placed batteries of 7.5's cover the insurgent support lines.

OBVIOUS LINE

The obvious line of attack for the insurgents would be first to cross the Corunna road somewhere between El Escorial and Madrid, thus cutting off the Government troops in the Sierras, and then to advance on the capital from the north. But either this move has not occurred to them, or else there is some reason which makes it either inexpedient or impossible of accomplishment.

Another move which might have been made, but has not been, is to cut the all-important Valencia road, which is the only free road out of Madrid to the coast, and along which all supplies and reinforcements must come.

This morning, about 8.30 o'clock, insurgent aeroplanes flew over the city again. They were again intercepted by the Government fighting 'planes. A few bombs were dropped before the Government machines took the air, but apparently the insurgents were chased off with losses, as three parachutes were to be seen floating in the sky.

SEVENTEEN 'PLANES DOWN

MADRID AND LISBON CLAIMS

The Spanish Embassy in Paris, telephoning to the Madrid War Department at 8 p.m. last evening, learned that most of yesterday's fighting was in the air. There were three separate attacks on the capital by insurgent 'planes, nine of which are said to have been brought down, while the Government side lost three.

The insurgents claim to have shot down eight Government 'planes in the air battle over the capital, according to the Diario de Lisboa correspondent. It is admitted that one insurgent 'plane is reported missing, and another was forced down, damaged by machine-gun fire.

"MARXIST MAN-HUNT"

"It is lamentable that nations like Great Britain and the United States and other highly-civilised peoples, who possess societies for the protection of animals, should pay no attention to the veritable man-hunt organised by the Marxists since August 18," declared General Queipo de Llano, broadcasting from Seville.

The report that the Soviet steamer Sojusvodnikov had been captured by an insurgent steamer, while carrying a cargo of arms to Spain, is not confirmed in British naval quarters at Gibraltar.

Following the denunciation of "Soviet methods in Spain" by Signor Grandi, at the meeting of the Non-Intervention Committee, it is announced in authoritative circles in Rome that Italy will not take any decision about leaving the Non-Intervention Committee until she sees what Soviet Russia does.

ONE-DISH MEALS

After to-morrow Spaniards in insurgent areas will be allowed only one dish at each meal. The difference in expense on the meals will be contributed to the public subscription "for the war of national liberation." Those who disobey will have their names published in the Press, and be fined, according to an insurgent order widely broadcast yesterday.

The Casablanca correspondent of The Times states that the supporters of General Franco make no attempt to conceal their intention, once victory has been gained, to prevent the Air France Company from sending its commercial machines on the Moroccan and South American service across Spanish territory. Negotiations with the German authorities for the re-establishment of the German air line from Barcelona to Seville, with an eventual extension to South America via Tetuan and the Canaries, are now in progress.

"CLEAN UP" AT RIO TINTO MINES

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

GIBRALTAR, Friday.

Since the insurgents captured the British-owned Rio Tinto mines in South-West Spain they have shot over 1,500 Communist miners, including a hundred women, during cleaning-up operations in the district, Reuter learns from a high British official of the mine who has arrived here.

Meanwhile, after five days, savage fighting is still going on in the Estepona-Malaga front, north-west of Gibraltar, and, according to news reaching here, the insurgents have been forced to retreat.

TO BE RELEASED

BELFAST AMBULANCE MEN

Messrs. Boyd and McMahon, the Belfast members of the Scottish ambulance unit, who were captured by insurgents near Madrid, are to be released.

Sir D. M. Stevenson, who organised the unit, yesterday received the following telegram from the Foreign Secretary, Mr. Anthony Eden:—

"Burgos authorities have informed Ambassador that Boyd and McMahon are properly cared for, and will be set at liberty at any point on the frontier they choose."

Sir Daniel immediately telegraphed the good news to Alderman Midgeley, Belfast, where both men have their homes, and to the unit headquarters at Madrid.

HANDCUFFED TO LAMP-POST

BELFAST SOLDIER'S ORDEAL

Charged with assaulting a soldier on furlough by handcuffing him to a lamp-post, and with the illegal possession of firearms, Thomas Morris, of Ardglen Park, Belfast, and William Wiggins, of Torrens road, Belfast, were, at Belfast Police Court yesterday, committed for trial at the next City Commission.

When charged both men made no reply.

Daniel Smith, of the Royal Artillery, Bordon, said that on October 26 while he was talking to a girl in the doorway of her home at Brookfield street, about six men advanced towards him. One said that they wanted him, and ordered him to accompany them. They took him to a lamp-post at the corner of Crumlin street. There he was handcuffed to the lamp-post with his hands behind him, and a card was hung round his neck. The men then went away. He recognised both the accused men among the men.

VETERINARY SURGEON'S APPEAL

SENTENCE OF IMPRISONMENT REMOVED

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

WICKLOW, Friday.

Thomas Anderson, veterinary surgeon, Albert avenue, Bray, appealed at Wicklow Circuit Court against a conviction for being drunk in charge of a motor car at Bray, with sentence of one month's imprisonment and suspension of licence for twelve months; and, secondly, with driving in a manner dangerous to the public.

The Judge believed the evidence for the prosecution that at 6 p.m. Anderson was drunk and drove his car dangerously, and he confirmed the conviction and sentences.

Later in the sittings, Mr. Reilly, solicitor, brought before the judge the fact, not previously announced, that imprisonment would entail knocking Mr. Anderson off the roll of veterinary surgeons in the Free State and affiliated colleges of the British Isles, and he felt sure that if this fact had been made known it would affect his decision.

The Judge expressed reluctance to interfere with the sentence in spite of the seriousness of the result. He said that he was disposed to send a man of position to jail as a lesson to others, and would more readily accede to a humbler man's petition. He asked the opinion of the State.

Mr. Cullen, State Solicitor, said that the fact as now stated had not been made known to the District Justice or to that Court, but if his lordship was disposed to impose a fine in lieu of imprisonment they would not oppose.

The Judge said that professional men should be made examples of, referring to the danger of drunken men driving, and added that there was now no deterrent for this crime except the prison. As he would be absolutely destroyed at his time of life by the sentence, and on account of his age and health, he, after much consideration, reluctantly removed the imprisonment, and imposed a fine of £25, and affirmed the fine that had been imposed for driving dangerously.

FULL POWER TRIALS

BELFAST-BUILT CRUISER

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Friday.

The H.M.S. Penelope, the first ship built for the Royal Navy at Belfast since the Great War, left the harbour to-day for full power trials in the North Channel.

The Penelope is a cruiser of the Arethusa class, with a standard displacement of 5,200 tons. Her complement numbers several hundred officers and men, two hundred of whom did not join the ship until this week. After trials the Penelope proceeds to Portsmouth, and is expected to join the Mediterranean Fleet early in December.

The Duchess of Abercorn, who launched the Penelope in October, 1935, sent a message of good luck to the vessel, which was acknowledged by Captain Hutton.

H.M.S. Belfast, which is the next warship to be built by Harland and Wolff, will be laid down towards the end of December or early in January. She will be considerably larger than the Penelope.

POPULATION OF SOUTH AFRICA INCREASED

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

JOHANNESBURG, Friday.

Since 1931 the total population of South Africa has increased by 1,456,065, and the European population has increased by 175,337.

According to preliminary figures just released by the Census Department there are now 9,588,665 people in the Union. European men in the country number 1,017,699, compared with 985,813 European women, making a total white population of 2,003,512.

NEWRY AND THE CORONATION

VIEWS OF BOARD OF GUARDIANS

NO ACTION TO BE TAKEN UNTIL MARCH

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

NEWRY, Friday.

At a meeting of the Newry Board of Guardians, the Chairman (Mr. Griffin) referring to the Ministry's circular letter regarding the Coronation of King Edward VIII., said that they should adjourn consideration of it till March, as the Coronation was not till May.

Mr. McGeough moved the adoption of the following resolution:—"That until such time as the King and Government of England cease to deprive Ireland of its freedom and unity, we refuse to consider the question of any notice of any celebrations connected with English royalty."

The Chairman said that the Urban Council had adjourned consideration of the matter till January, and he thought he was not asking too much in asking the Board to take a headline from that body. It was, he believed, the best procedure.

Mr. Baird—I don't think it does any good at all to "ragamuffin" the British Empire and the King.

Mr. Connell stated that unless the members agreed to withdraw their propositions it might place the Board in an awkward position. There would be no great harm done if the matter were held over till March.

Mr. McGeough—I'll withdraw from the meeting sooner than withdraw my resolution.

Mr. Connell then moved that the matter be adjourned until March, and Mr. McClean seconded.

On a division it was decided by 39 votes to four to let the matter stand adjourned.

RURAL COUNCIL'S DECISION

At a meeting in Newry of the No. 2 (Co. Armagh) Rural District Council, Mr. J. Jeffers, J.P., chairman, presiding, Mr. McGeough also objected to any celebrations in connection with the Coronation, and moved that no action be taken. The attitude of the people of South Armagh was well known, he said.

Mr. J. Cooke (Unionist)—Did not you take an oath of allegiance (referring to Mr. McGeough's membership of the Board)?

Mr. McGeough—Yes; but the people do not want to pay out any money.

Mr. Nugent, supporting the motion, said that as long as the country was divided they could not participate.

The Chairman denied Mr. McGeough's assertion that the King was a party to the partition of Ireland. The King had suggested that the matter be settled before the Coronation.

The motion to take no action was declared carried.

FROM A PARIS BALCONY

LECTURE BY ABBE DIMNET

"FROM A PARIS BALCONY" was the title of a lecture delivered yesterday by the Very Rev. Abbé Ernest Dimnet at the Royal Dublin Society. This title was also the title of a book by the Abbé Dimnet.

It covered a period of thirty years, and concerned what he had seen from the balcony of a house in Paris, which once had been the residence of Madame du Barry. It was begun in a series of letters for London readers concerning literature, life and politics.

Proudly referring to his college he mentioned that in 1914 fourteen of the members of the French Academy had come from it, including Anatole France and Rostand, the author of "Cyrano de Bergerac" and "Chanticleer," and that these two were then very busy demolishing the reputation of Zola, and "you know," he said, "how unfortunate Zola's reputation was for France." These two men were infinitely more French than Zola in sentiment, in temperament and in outlook, for Zola was something of an Italian and partly a Jew. They aimed to take French literature out of the place in which Zola had put it, and they succeeded. It was only lately that Zola's credit had revived, and, in his opinion, to a certain extent rightly so.

LIVING IN THE CLOUDS

Anatole France had been an immense success both as a writer and a thinker, but he was distinctly an internationalist. He lived in the clouds, and made his appeal to the whole universe. His philosophy was not for the good of the French. It would have been pretty poor fare in equipping them for the war. Fortunately Maurice Barrett was fortified with an entirely different philosophy. Barrett said: "I belong to this country. It is the place where I was born. My people have a claim on me. What I am is owing to them; what they have handed down to me I shall have to pass on for the good of my son." That was a far superior view to that of Anatole France, and when the war came it was lucky for the French people that they had been imbued with Barrett's views of life, or the issue would have been very different. It was a strange thing that the literary descendants of Anatole France were sordid realists, and those of Maurice Barrett were strangely imbued with classicism.

Describing the Frenchman's love of the place where he was born, he said the heart of the peasant was in the land. While five millions of Frenchmen might become Communists, 36,000,000 could never become Communists because of their attachment to the soil.

PRICES OF PIGS

The latest prices of pigs fixed for the Free State Pigs Marketing Board current until the end of the year show an increase of 1s. 6d. per cwt. in the case of factory-purchased pigs of Class 1 Grade A, and corresponding increase in pigs of other grades.

Prices of live pigs are increased by 1s. 6d. per cwt.

The prices of pork carcases have also been increased by 2s. per cwt. in all classes save the heaviest, in which the increase is 4s. per cwt.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S MEN'S SOCIETY

At the opening meeting of St. Bartholomew's Men's Society, which was held last night in the Library of the Vicarage, Clyde road, Dublin, Mr. R. M. Smyllie delivered an address on "Europe To-day." Included in the photograph of those present are:Sir Robert Tate, Mr. Manning Robertson, Rev. Canon Simpson, Dr. J. S. Ashe, Professor Brontë Gatenby, Mr. A. D. Stewart, Mr. Burgess, Mr. Roberts, Mr. Lefroy and the Rev. Mr. Simms.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S MEN'S SOCIETY

TALK ON "EUROPE TO-DAY"

The opening meeting of the St. Bartholomew's Men's Society was held in the Vicarage Library last night, when a talk on "Europe To-day" was given by Mr. R. M. Smyllie. In a concise summary of German and central European affairs over a thousand years Mr. Smyllie accounted for the outlook and geographical position of those countries to-day. Germany he saw as a great and virile nation, growing yearly, without adequate resources for food and raw materials. The German people did not want war, but through real want they inevitably were being forced into this position. He described the terms of the Treaties of St. Germain and Versailles as crimes—the dragon's teeth of which the world is to-day about to reap the crop. Referring to dictatorships, he said that in this respect democracy had failed; it had failed to give real moral leadership. What democracy wanted was a man like Hitler or Mussolini, but one who would preach, not force, dishonesty or vulgarity, but something of that spirit that Woodrow Wilson showed in 1918.

A vote of thanks to the speaker was proposed by Sir Robert Tate, and seconded by Mr. A. E. Aldwell.

Among those present were:—The Rev. Canon W. C. Simpson, Vicar of St. Bartholomew's; Dr. James Ashe, Professor Bronte Gatenby, the Rev. G. O. Simms, curate; Messrs. M. Manning Robertson, President of the Society; R. Burgess, Secretary; R. Holmes, J. H. Robinson, R. W. Lefroy, N. Gilbert, G. McGlinchy, F. H. Christian, T. W Newell, J. W. P. Pope, A. Cavanagh and G. Despard.

BOY'S ALLEGATIONS AGAINST GUARDS

STATEMENT IN JUVENILE COURT

(BEFORE MR. CUSSEN.)

A ten and a half years old boy, one of three children charged in the Juvenile Court, Dublin, with having broken into shops at Aungier and Stephen streets and stolen cigarettes, denying the offence, alleged in evidence that when taken to Lad lane station he was brought by Guard Cullen into a long room and assaulted.

"When I went into the room the Guard asked me if I was on the premises where the cigarettes were taken," said the boy, "and when I said 'No, I know nothing about them,' the Guard struck me on the jaw, and said he would leave me in the dark room all night if I did not tell the truth. The Guard took a revolver out of his back pocket, and when I saw it I cried in case he would shoot me. He then gave me a box and hit me on the forehead with the gun, and I fell to the floor.

"Guard Cullen then went out," continued the witness, "and Guard Feeny came in and said, 'I will stick your head in the lavatory: we will have no fits here.' He commenced to swear. I was then brought back to the day room, where my mother was waiting, and when she saw me she said to the Guards, 'You ought to be ashamed to beat that child.' She caught me by the arm, and, noticing that it was wet, she asked me if they threw water on me, and I replied 'No, that is where they stuck my arm down the lavatory.' When my mother spoke she was put out in the street."

The boy added that he went to Mercer's Hospital for treatment, and was attending as a patient for five days.

The allegations were denied by Guards Cullen and Fogarty and Station-Sergeant P. J. Callar, and also by Inspector Maher.

The hearing was adjourned.

ONE TABLE TOURNAMENT

TO HELP SOLDIERS', SAILORS' AND AIRMEN'S FAMILIES

A one-table card tournament, which can be engaged in at any time before December 9 next at any place, has been arranged in aid of the Soldiers', Sailors, and Airmen's Families' Association. Cards for the competition cost 10s., which is 2s. 6d. per player, and three rubbers of bridge or whist can be played, and the scoring cards must be returned to the office of the Association before the above date. To certain "lucky tables" prizes will be allotted, sometimes to the highest and sometimes to the lowest scorer, and the draw will be made by Lord HolmPatrick and Lady HolmPatrick, the place and date of the draw to be announced on December 5th. Many prominent Dublin hostesses have already arranged parties having several tables for competitors. The proceeds will go to augment the almost exhausted funds, with which the Association provides clothing, fuel, bedding and other necessities to the many distressed relatives of soldiers, sailors and airmen.

HAMMOND AS A BOWLER

NEW SOUTH WALES COLLAPSE

NEW CANDIDATE FOR AUSTRALIAN XI.

SYDNEY, Friday.

REFRESHED by a rest following his century-making efforts, Walter Hammond played the part of destructor-in-chief for the M.C.C. to-day and brought about the collapse of New South Wales, who, after being 219 for 3, lost seven wickets for 54 runs, and were all out for 273. In reply M.C.C. scored 1 for 0 before an appeal against the light brought play to a close.

Hammond was the outstanding bowler in an attack which, after being flogged by S. J. McCabe (83) and R. Robinson (91), who put on 145 runs for the fourth wicket, was particularly hostile after tea. Making the most of the new ball, Hammond bowled quite fast and with plenty of sting. His in-swingers were very disconcerting, and a cleverly-disguised slower ball caught the batsmen napping. His length was impeccable.

The most pleasing feature, from the Australian point of view, was the brilliant form of R. Robinson, who was only nine short of his century. Already chosen to play for the Australian XI. against the M.C.C. on the same ground next week, Robinson enhanced his reputation with a display of fine all-round cricket. Although of slight stature, he gets plenty of power into his strokes, a feature of which were his off-drives and attractive late-cuts. His footwork, too, was extremely good. He never appeared to be in the slightest difficulty, although when 19 he survived a confident appeal for l.b.w. by Copson, and he completed his 50 in 88 minutes. His whole innings lasted two hours 50 minutes and included 11 fours.

McCabe, the home captain, also pulled out his best form, and, with Robinson's support, brought about a change of fortunes after New South Wales had lost three wickets for 74. McCabe gave a classic exhibition of stroke play, in which square cuts, hooks and pulls predominated. He scored his 50, including 6 fours, in 85 minutes, and in all was at the wicket two and a-quarter hours for his 83, which included 10 fours.

HIGH SCHOOL PRIZE DAY

AN ENCOURAGING REPORT

CULTURAL ASPECT OF EDUCATION

THE importance of the cultural aspect of education was stressed at the annual distribution of prizes at the High School, Dublin, yesterday afternoon. The Vice-Provost of Trinity College (Professor W. E. Thrift, T.D.), presided.

The Headmaster (Mr. John Bennett, M.A.), in his report said that the number of boys on the register showed an increase over that for the preceding year, and in the school year, which began in the autumn, they already had the largest enrolment of new boys which he could remember. There had also been an increasing number of openings of various kinds for their boys on leaving school. They could claim to have a larger staff and more classes and classrooms than in those spacious days when most of the present large Protestant schools in Dublin were not yet founded, and when therefore there was less of the friendly rivalry which was unavoidable to-day.

People, he said, had often asked what became of their boys when they left school. About one-third of them entered universities or other institutions leading to a profession. The greater part of the remainder secured posts in Dublin. Some left the Free State because their parents went away; but the school did not educate for export.

For the first year the school had won a Scholarship into Trinity College. After referring to the many successes of past pupils in Trinity College, Mr. Bennett said that in the Scripture examinations held by the General Synod and the Presbyterian Assembly over one hundred had passed, of whom fifty won honours.

In the Certificate examinations the published results had little meaning, as boys who would easily have passed with honours might fail in Irish. Twelve boys had obtained honours (apart from Irish) and eight had passed—the largest number for many years, the marks being very good on the whole. There had been three reasons which had prevented their school and other similar schools from reaching a higher standard in Irish in these examinations. First, the effort which they were making to keep up French and German; second, the difficulty in securing competent and continuous teachers of Irish; thirdly, the fact that so many pupils coming to them at the age of about 12 years knew no Irish.

The first of the reasons would continue; they would not give up modern languages unless absolutely forced to do so. (Applause.) The second reason had, he hoped, disappeared; they had an excellent Irish teacher. Lastly, the preparatory schools were all teaching Irish now and boys need not begin Irish with them at a time when they were starting other new subjects. The inspector's report on last year's Irish was distinctly encouraging.

Once again the school had been awarded the prizes given by the German Government for the best record in teaching German.

EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM

Continuing, Mr. Bennett said that he had often heard of criticism that one of the defects of their secondary educational system was that the curriculum was based on the false assumption that all boys wanted to enter a University. This criticism he had heard from University professors, as well as from business men. "If boys are going to follow business careers," they said, "why not train them in the work which they will do during all their lives?" The answer to that, said Mr. Bennett, had been given by President de Valera at an educational gathering some time ago, when he said that for most people in the future the secondary school would be their university. Let them frankly, then, make their school education cultural. They would learn quickly enough how to keep accounts, to buy and sell and barter, to guide machinery and to make goods from raw materials, but unless an interest was aroused in school in things other than the making and buying and selling of material things there was no hope that it would arise later. A good general education was the best preparation on which to build a life of usefulness to the community, even on the material side.

THE VICE-PROVOST'S TRIBUTE

After presenting the prizes, Professor W. Thrift, who is Chairman of the Board of Governors, said that it was a great help to the head of the school and to the staff to see so many parents, guardians and friends taking such a direct interest in the work of the boys. He would like to congratulate most heartily the Headmaster and the loyal staff on the work carried out during the year. He did not think that he had ever heard a more satisfactory report. The appreciation of the school by the public was reflected in the numbers on the rolls, which were rapidly reaching peak figures. It was satisfactory to learn that the Headmaster had been successful in placing an increasing number of pupils in employment in the Free State.

Referring to failures of the school's pupils in the Intermediate examination "because the boys could not learn, or had not learned, Irish," he said that if they accepted money from the State—as he feared they were obliged to do in these days—it seemed to him inevitably to follow that if the State insisted on their teaching Irish they must do it. If they undertook to teach Irish they must undertake to do it in the best way. They were doing their best to remedy that reproach, and had taken every step to see that the boys had the best teaching in Irish.

The following special prizes were awarded: The Old Boys' Cup, presented by the Old Boys each year to the best type of boy in the school, presented by Mr. George B. Butler, Representative Church Body, to John C. Gilmour; Carpenter Memorial Prize (A. N. Jeffares); German Government Prizes (J. C. Gilmour, senior, and K. E. J. Tyrrell, junior); French Government Prizes (J. C. Gilmour, senior, and K. E. J. Tyrrell, junior).

THE RULE OF LAW

SPECIAL POWERS IN NORTH AND SOUTH

FREE STATE LAWYER'S VIEWS

IF the position in other countries of the world to-day were considered it could not fail to be realised that the law was enforced here in a manner that was not only impartial, but, taking all the circumstances into account, highly successful.

This view was expressed by Mr. J. E. Lynch, honorary secretary of the Dublin University Law Society, in a paper on "The Rule of Law," read at the inaugural meeting of the Society last night.

Mr. Lynch explained the principles of the rule of law, and said that so long as the Courts were Courts of Justice in fact, and not in name merely, individual rights were sure to be maintained.

TWO SPECIAL ACTS

Speaking of the duty of the Government in relation to the law, the secretary touched on the Constitution Amendment Act in the Free State and the Special Powers Act in Northern Ireland, and said both were virtually a direct negation of the rule of law. In especial circumstances the Constitution Amendment Act seemed to be fully justified, but the moment that these extraordinary circumstances ceased then the Act ought no longer to remain in operation. Both in the Irish Free State and in Northern Ireland one could not fail to notice that a movement was on foot with the avowed object of overthrowing by force the lawfully established Government, and under such circumstances only by unfailing vigil could the rule of law be maintained.

He was satisfied that the prevailing circumstances justified the existence of the Special Powers Act in the North, but it was to be regretted that the Prime Minister of Northern Ireland saw fit to declare recently that as long as he was Prime Minister the Act would remain in force—a statement which must inevitably give rise to the feeling that, to say the least of it, it was with mixed motives that the Act was being enforced. While there had been signs of disorder which could not fail to cause a certain amount of uneasiness, and a number of outrages had been committed, they had every reason to feel gratified that the supremacy of the law was maintained as well as it was.

It was their duty to see that the progress which had been made in the last thirteen or fourteen years was maintained, until they finally reached the day when it would be no longer necessary for the law to be bolstered up with Public Safety Acts and other similar enactments. That day had not yet come, but hopeful signs had not of late been lacking, and, with the exercise of patience and a firm and constant administration of the law, it might not be far off.

IRISHMEN'S SPECIAL GLORY

Moving a vote of thanks to Mr. Lynch, Mr. J. M. FitzGerald, K.C., said that Irishmen had a very special glory in the rule of law. To Englishmen it was a growth of centuries of civilisation, but that was not how Ireland got her rule of law. Ireland got it as an alien plant, forced upon it by the rude hand of an alien ruler, and were it not for the natural gift of the Irish people and their passionate love of fair-play, with an ingenuous love of argument, that beautiful plant would have perished on this alien soil. But it did not come to a soil which did not have the benefit of a juridical system of its own. When the rule of English law was imposed on this country it was not imposed on barbarians or savages; this country had a most perfect system of law of its own unique in Western Europe. The system of the Brehon law was a far more civilised growth than the system of English law which replaced it, but founded on the most splendid principles. The English law, though it had thrived wonderfully, had failed to impress itself upon the inherent and deep-seated love of the Irish people for freedom, and in his opinion the enforcement of coercive legislation in this country to uphold the rule of law must be stormed on the rock. It was as useless to treat people with that as with any other form of barbarity; they must be taken and not driven. In this country even the Act of 1887 only drove the fire underneath where it burned more fiercely than ever. It was burning as fiercely in 1916 and 1932 as at that time.

He thought the Act of 1932 was most deplorable. Its only justification was panic.

THE COURTS' FUNCTIONS

Professor D. A. Binchy, M.A., D.Ph., seconded. He said that he did not personally approve of the principles on which administrative law was founded, but it effected substantial justice as between the individual and the Government. One of the militating circumstances against the rule of law at the present time was that the State nowadays concerned itself with far more branches of human life and individual effort than in the past and the fact that law-making was becoming increasingly the monopoly of Parliament. There was an increasing tendency on the part of Parliament to usurp the functions of the courts in that respect.

On the proposal of Mr. T. C. Kingsmill Moore, K.C., seconded by Mr. O. S. Skeffington, M.A., Ph.D., a motion that the University Law Society was worthy of the support of the law students of the University was passed.

THE TYRANT'S PLEA

Mr. George Leonard, K.C., who presided, concluding the meeting, said he agreed that there were occasions when the administration of the ordinary law could not be enforced by ordinary tribunals in the ordinary way. But, while he admitted that, he would remind them that necessity had ever been the tyrant's plea. Assuming there was such necessity, was it necessary to meet it by such legislation as was put on the Statute Book at the time of the Constitution Amendment Act? Could the position that then arose not have been met by a tribunal which had the assistance of some person of legal training; would it not be possible to allow it, though absolutely supreme within its powers, to be under the jurisdiction of the ordinary law of the land in the ordinary courts, so that anybody who had a case would be entitled to go to these courts? It was, as it stood, a complete code, which made the Executive in power complete masters of the higher and lower justice, and of the life and limb of everybody they might not like. The mere fact that it was not applied in that way did not alter it from the constitutional viewpoint.

From that viewpoint, too, the Second Chamber deserved to be extinguished by reason of its failure at the time of the Public Safety Act to point out that it should be covered by some special tribunal that would not offend against the ordinary principles of freedom.

CASE OF NORTHERN SOLICITOR

LORD CHIEF JUSTICE'S COMMENTS

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Friday.

The Lord Chief Justice, in the High Court, Belfast, to-day declared:—"I do not want it to go out that because money in default has been paid back under pressure the culprit gets away scot-free. I could have suspended him or struck him off the Rolls. I will not do that now, but I will not sit here and compound a felony. I will send the papers to the Attorney-General, and he can decide whether he will prosecute or not."

The case was an adjourned application in the matter of a solicitor and the Solicitors Acts—ex parte, the Incorporated Law Society of Northern Ireland.

At previous hearings, while the name of the solicitor was not disclosed, it was revealed that he belonged to Londonderry; that he was aged; that he had retired, and that the money in default had been made up.

Mr. McCoy, representing the solicitor, said that everything had been settled up.

The Lord Chief Justice—Has anything been forthcoming for creditors?

Mr. McCoy said that the solicitor's professional brethren had made good the default.

McAdoo will read a paper on Pádraig O'Conaire, the Irish author, to whom a statue was unveiled in Eyre square, Galway, some little time ago. The paper will be read in English. On Tuesday the Modern Languages Society will meet at 3.30 p.m., when Miss E. McIntosh will read a paper on "Das deutsche Mädchen von Heute." Dr. M. F. Liddell will occupy the chair. The Metaphysical Society are holding a debate at the same hour, and Mr. E. A. Crawford will propose the motion "That the importance of knowledge of systems in philosophy is over-emphasised." The negative will be moved by Mr. J. de C. Short. The Rev. R. R. Hartford, B.D., will take the chair.

"An Irish-Speaking State"

On Wednesday at 8.15 the College Historical Society will debate the motion: "That this House would welcome an Irish-speaking State." The affirmative will be headed by Mr. W. I. McCutcheon and the negative by Mr. R. B. McDowell. Professor Eoin MacNeill, of University College, Dublin, will be in the chair.

The Dublin University Players opened their season last Thursday, when Miss E. M. Mossman produced "Smokescreens," by Harold Brighouse.

The Dublin University Mission to Chota Nagpur will hold a sale of work in the C.M.S. Hall, 35 Molesworth street, on Wednesday and Thursday from 12.30 p.m. to 6 p.m. Combined entrance and lunch tickets are available at 2s. 6d. each.

The Volunteer Force

The College Volunteer Force is anxious to enroll recruits, and Captain M. O'Connell, the administrative and training officer, will attend daily at No. 11 College to interview applicants. Information may also be obtained from present members of the corps or from any of the Fellow-Tutors. The company is open to all students of the University who are sons of Irish parents. Members are supplied with uniform and equipment, and parades are held once each week during the evenings of Arts Term. Members of the corps also attend a camp which is held annually. Many old Trinity men will be pleased to learn that J. P. O'Brien Twohig, who graduated in 1924, has recently been gazetted with accelerated promotion from his regiment, the King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry, into the West Yorks Regiment with ante-date of captaincy to the 19th of May last. His total service is under 10 years, and promotion to the rank of captain in the King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry usually takes 14 years. Accelerated promotion can only be obtained when an officer has received, during his service, at least three separate and distinct recommendations from different general officers testifying to his outstanding qualities. Captain Twohig is a member of a well-known Dublin family.

The Rugby XV. were defeated on Saturday last by 15 points to 6 in a match played against Blackrock in the College Park. The team have been on tour in England during the past week, and lost their match against Cambridge University by 9 points to 8. Last Saturday the Hockey XI. were successful against Pembroke Wanderers by 4 goals to 1.

WEDDING

MR. S. M. COX AND MISS M. E. STRONG-HECKLES

The wedding took place yesterday at St. Nicholas' Church, Durham, of Mr. Shaun Maturin Cox, son of Dr. and Mrs. Cox, of Hawthornden, Howth, Co. Dublin, and Miss Marjorie Ethel Strong-Heckles, daughter of the late Mr. Lynn Strong-Heckles and of Mrs. Lyn Strong-Heckles, of Durham.

The Rev. Frederick Pickering officiated at the ceremony, which was fully choral.

The bride, who was given away by her brother, wore a classical gown of Paris white satin cloque, with long sleeves and a high neck-line. The train was cut in one with the skirt, and over it fell a billowy tulle veil, mounted on a silver coronet, with touches of orange blossom and an effective face-veil. She carried a bouquet of lilies.

There were four bridesmaids—Miss E. A. Dickenson-Oliver (niece of the bride), Miss P. M. Dickenson-Oliver, Miss B. Tredenick, and Miss C. Tredenick. They wore moss green taffeta frocks, with touches of violet, and carried rucked muffs of green. Their headdresses were of violet. The two small bridesmaids wore white taffeta dresses, with moss-green velvet sashes, and violets at the neck-line. They carried muffs and wore white Quaker caps, trimmed with violets.

Mr. Terry Earp acted as best man, and the groomsmen in the church were Mr. Bill Tully and Mr. John Hope.

After the ceremony a reception was held by the bride's mother, who wore a blue cloque suit and a hat to match. She carried a bouquet of pink carnations. The bridegroom's mother wore a brown ensemble and carried chrysanthemums in autumn tints.

During the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Shaun Maturin Cox left for their honeymoon, the latter wearing a Palma-green corded velvet ensemble, with revers and barrel-muff of skunk fur, and a hat in felt softened with an ostrich mount.

GOSSIP FROM THE COURSE

YOUNG ENGLAND'S CUP

Bell Boy Springs a Surprise in Molyneux 'Chase

LIVERPOOL, Friday Night.

YOUNG ENGLAND gave definite proof of his class by the way he won the Autumn Cup at Liverpool to-day. He raced past Lovely Rosa, and had plenty in reserve to hold off Papyrette and Inchkeith.

Highlander was last to enter the straight, yet made such excellent progress that many people thought he had finished third. Instead, he was just beaten by Inchkeith for that position.

William of Valence, the top-weight, had not arrived in the parade ring before the race. His trainer, Persse, and Pat Beasley, his jockey, had to go out of the paddock to the stables to find him. Beasley had to kick his goloshes off in the road, throw off his overcoat, leap on the horse and rush on to the course in double-quick time, as the others were all at the starting gate.

Pegomas Disappoints Again

Pegomas, a disappointing favourite for the Cambridgeshire, was again soundly backed. After being among the leaders for a mile, he finished in the last three.

Reward dashed his head into the barrier before the start and tore a large hole in the webbing before he could release himself. He threw his jockey, W. Christie, who was fortunate to escape injury.

When Lovely Rosa raced easily into the lead entering the straight and made for the good going, it seemed she must make a formidable rival for the best of the others. She did not stay, however. Papyrette, lightly assessed, put up a fine display to finish second. Crisa must be given credit for running well.

Rippon Tor was a negligible factor, and Heavy Weight was another who disappointed. Remember II., the bottom-weight, was far from disgraced.

Good Tactics

Bodkin's victory in the Rous Memorial Plate was entirely due to the tactics of her rider, E. Smith. Under the impression that he would find faster going on the stand side Smith took Bodkin over there after turning into the straight. She raced in complete isolation, and found the ground so much to her liking that she won with great ease.

It will be remembered that two other remarkable wins were brought off by horses trained by Jack Jarvis through the adoption of similar tactics. Jack Jarvis was responsible for Miracle when that horse won the Eclipse Stakes in 1932, and for Flamenco when he beat Colombo at Ascot in 1934. In each case the victory was achieved through the jockey taking a different part of the track to race on. Each success was a tribute to Jarvis. Think Twice filly, the favourite here, finished last.

End of a Losing Sequence

Every jockey riding in the Downe Nursery was determined to profit by E. Smith's example in the previous race. It was certainly an unusual sight to see the whole field swinging wide on the bend to the stand side. This time E. Smith's brother, Douglas, was first home on Grasshopper, and thereby put an end to a long losing run.

Smith rode with power and skill to beat Harry Wragg on Bold Ben. There was a tremendous finish for second and third places. Quassan, who was third, would probably have won but for losing several lengths at the start.

It was a fine performance on the part of Bell Boy to win the Molyneux Steeplechase. He is only a six years old, and is clearly destined for a successful career in the steeplechasing world. Full marks must be given to Pencraik for the way he struggled to beat Bell Boy on the flat. He was not quite good enough, however.

Delachance blundered three fences from home, otherwise he might have made a great fight with the winner. Saint Christopher appeared to be going well when he fell, three fences from home.

A Splendid Finish

E. Smith, having set the fashion of racing on the stand side of the course, proceeded to show his versatility by winning the Stewards' Handicap on Kinderscout, who raced on the far and worst side of the track.

It was a splendid finish. Red Garter, the favourite, who was endeavouring to record a local win for Lord Sefton, was outpaced. The Dentist made the running to the straight and then dropped out. Rydon Fairy was third on merit.

T. Weston gained a popular win on Flaxley Tom in the Duchy Stakes. The gelding was favourite, so there was every reason for the cheer which greeted his win.

LAUREAT II. NAPPED

Drinmore Lad Fancied for Valentine 'Chase

ON his third in the Cambridgeshire Laureat II. appears to be a good thing for the Grosvenor Cup, the feature at the concluding stage of the Liverpool meeting to-day. This mile will suit even better than the Newmarket nine furlongs, and connections are confident of success.

The locally-trained Sally Andrews is bound to be one of Laureat II.'s chief challengers. The filly has a most consistent record. I understand that she has quite recovered from the slight mishap which prevented her from contesting the Cambridgshire.

Boston West, back to his very best form, judging by his prominent showing when second to Nov. Nov. at Hurst Park last month, is also likely to be thereabouts at the finish. Commander III. did not get a clear run in the Cambridgeshire. With ordinary luck here he is expected at least to gain a place.

Kyles of Minard has been moving particularly well at home recently, and does not appear to be badly handicapped with 7st. 12lb. There is much to like about Galvani, who missed an earlier engagement in order to contest this race. He will have the assistance of the champion jockey, Gordon Richards.

Squadron Castle has done nothing of note recently, but hails from Jack Jarvis's stable, which is at the top of its form, so should not be allowed to run unbacked. Silver Birch may show up most prominently of the remainder. A confident selection is made of

LAUREAT II.

Ego, second in this year's "National," is certain to make a bold bid for the Valentine Steeplechase, although I have more liking for who was well backed when just missing a place in the race won by Novgorod at Nottingham last month. He is a fairly safe fencer. Silver Linnet makes most appeal of the others.

TUMBREL,

winner of her last two races, should complete the "hat trick" in the Autumn Foal Stakes, although Royal Romance is sure to make a good attempt to coincide the filly 9lb. Battle Royal is the only other competitor with any creditable form to recommend.

A number of smart hurdle racers will be among the runners for the November Hurdle. G. Evans saddles Le Maestro and Cross-Wind. I slightly prefer the chance of and hope to see him successful. Royal Affaire, Mesmerist and Pluvier Dore are likely to have a battle royal with Cross-Wind for the minor positions.

Lord Derby hopes to add to his successes with Guiscard and Robber Chief by winning the Ormerod Plate with Recovery. I fancy that the gelding will meet one too good for him, however, in who has not been out since the spring, when he had one or two good displays to his credit.

GENTLE LILY,

runner-up in her last two races, may go one better in the Alt Selling Nursery. Fine Mouche may be the biggest danger to M. Peacock's charge.

THE FORM AND SELECTIONS FOR NAAS TO-DAY

A POPULAR MEETING

Field for the Autumn Cup: Up Sabre Fancied

BIG fields are invariably the order at Naas, and to-day's meeting, the last of the season at this venue, is no exception, declarations of running having been made for almost a hundred horses.

The chief event, the Naas Autumn Cup, will bring out a field of twenty, including Corofin, winner of the Irish Cesarewitch last month; Up Sabre, who ran third in that race, and other good-class middle-distance performers. Corrib Lady has incurred a penalty for her win at Leopardstown on Saturday, but in any event would be preferred over a shorter journey. Such as Speakeasy II., Rattle Up, Fancy Star, and the better of Mr. Kelly's pair, Ca-Ca-Ce and Mahoonagh, will find plenty of supporters, but in selecting backers may not be wide of the mark. Ruttle's charge is a winner over the course and distance, and should reverse the Curragh placings with Corofin.

Galli Galli won in impressive style over hurdles at the Curragh, and may add to that success by taking the Park Plate; while Mill Man, on his running behind Laitron, should prove best in the Proudstown Plate. Selections:—

Park Plate—Galli Galli.
Baldoyle Plate—Golden Spider.
Naas Autumn Cup—Up Sabre.
Leopardstown Plate—Miss Mufsie.
Proudstown Plate—Mill Man.

NEWMARKET NOTES

Laureat II. Expected to Win the Grosvenor Cup

NEWMARKET, Friday.

THERE was another good downfall of rain overnight at Newmarket. The going is now very holding on the various training grounds.

On the racecourse side of the town Frank Butters sent Felaxa, Menton, Near Relation, Her Sister, Tabrik, Bala Hissar and Charampur seven furlongs steadily. They will, no doubt, undergo good gallops to morrow with a view to their engagements during the remaining fortnight of flat racing.

R. Day gave his Derby Cup filly, Weathervane, with C. Rawles in the saddle, and in company with Merry Maid and Simonetta (R. Clayton), a nice pace gallop over a mile and a half. As I have previously mentioned, this hardy daughter of that great stayer, Son-in-Law, does not show any signs of the two hard races she had in the Cesarewitch Stakes and the Newbury Autumn Cup. I am quite prepared to her conspicious at the finish of next week's important handicap.

Lambton, who was on the Derby side, sharpened up the majority of his team over short distances. They will be subjected to good gallops work to-morrow.

Damascus is likely to take his chance in the Kenilworth Stakes at Warwick on Monday. He has forfeited his liability in the Derby Cup. With May Bulger, he galloped a mile at a good pace.

Avondale, Boethius, King's Gap and Saxicola at intervals went six furlongs at a nice pace Philadelphus, Ancient Warrior, Caer Dyn, Bingham and Merry and Bright traversed the same distance at an easy pace. Petoford and Lady's Slipper had a smart five furlongs spin Beatty's Idaho, Rose of Persia, and Spartan III. were given a good stripped gallop over seven furlongs. Idaho again went very well. I cannot trust him to reproduce the same form in the Osmaston Nursery next week after witnessing his display behind Mid-Day Sun in the Ditch Mile Nursery at our second October fixture. He absolutely refused to extend himself on that occasion. Plantagra, Japanese Lily, and Gracious Gift went five furlongs at a good pace.

Hogg's Red Horizon, North Devon, and Great Glory were sent six furlongs at a striding pace. Idolet, with Eastern Rose and Singpet traversed five furlongs at a similar rate.

ROYAL AFFAIRE (next best) is our only competitor for the November Hurdle Race at Liverpool to-morrow. T. R. Leader's charge won three races last jumping season. She has been a most consistent performer on the flat, having won two races and been placed in seven others out of eleven attempts. She is in splendid trim, and should be supported each way.

LAUREAT II.

should be capable of conceding the weight to Boston West and Silver Birch for the Grosvenor Cup. He has done well since finishing third in the Cambridgeshire, and he should score here.

FINE MOUCHE

should give a forward display in the Alt Selling Nursery.

BARNBY MOOR

may prove to be our best for the Liverpool Autumn Foal Stakes, and should at least gain place honours.

MESTRE*

may go close for the Ormerod Plate.

RUGBY FOOTBALL

TO-DAY'S SENIOR GAMES

Waterloo to Meet Wanderers at Lansdowne Road

THE most attractive of to-day's matches will be at Williamstown, where Blackrock College will play University College, Cork. Both sides are, so far, unbeaten, and are playing Rugby of the highest class. Blackrock have scored over 100 points in their six matches, and last Saturday gained an easy win over Dublin University in the College Park, whilst the Cork XV. have won their seven matches easily. Each side will be at full strength. J. J. O'Connor, D. Lane and J. J. Russell—all international players—will turn out for University College, and L. B. McMahon and P. Crowe for Blackrock.

Wanderers will have a visit from the Liverpool team, Waterloo, and as they have been improving in recent matches the home side may win. Clontarf and University College will be in opposition at Castle avenue, and form points to a victory for Clontarf, who are unbeaten. Old Wesley and Bective Rangers will be engaged at Donnybrook, and here the heavier Bective pack may pave the way to victory. Monkstown will entertain Knock at Sydney parade.

Lansdowne and Palmerston travel North. The former play Belfast Collegians, and Palmerston meet Northern Civil Service. Dublin University conclude their short cross-Channel tour with a match against London-Irish, and after their splendid, but unsuccessful, fight against Cambridge will very likely come out on top.

Railway Union play their annual match against the British Railways selected team at Park avenue. The Irish team were successful the last time the match was played in Dublin, but were defeated in London last season. Railway Union will rely on their usual 1st XV. On paper the British team appears to be a very strong combination, as Swallow, Spence and Wyles are Welsh Trial players, and R. T. Jones is an Oxford Blue. Some of the others have represented their county.

HUNTING

MEATH HOUNDS

It was blowing a gale when hounds drew Farran Alcock covert after meeting at Carlanstown on Thursday. They found in wild gorse, but after a lot of covert hunting they had to leave him. A Rathmanoe fox ran down the hill to the plantation and returned to the covert, left it again and went back to the plantation, where he got to ground. Then came a nice forty-five minutes from the wild gorse under Rathmanoe. This fox went away through the Moat farm to the wood at the Blessed Well, and turning to the left here ran to the road under Screebogue. Being headed here, turned back to the wild gorse, but was soon away again and led over the road to Screebogue covert, and thence to the Hermitage, where scent gave out. There were two brace in Robertstown, but nothing much could be done with him, and hounds were stopped as darkness was coming on.

From yesterday's meet at Kilmoon hounds found at once in Mr. Reynold's good covert, and went away through Newhaggard. Recrossing the road, the quarry ran through Newtown, and Newtown Moat nearly to Laurelmount, which he kept on the right and went on by Tobercreagan, Borranstown and Charstown to Ballymadu, where scent vanished. This was a very good hound-hunt of one hour and twenty minutes. Rathfeigh held an unenterprising specimen, who did not go far before returning to the covert and was left. Corballis was full of foxes, one of which broke in the direction of Macetown, whence he ran back to the covert, and was left there. This finished a very nice day's sport.

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL

WILL BRAY RETAIN THEIR PLACE?

THE WEEK-END LEAGUE MATCHES

When fighting for the Shield, and when even a draw would have meant the winning of it, Bohemians went to Cork and were beaten 4-1. Last week-end, in the opening League matches, Cork, again at home, lost by the odd goal in three.

"Students of form" would, therefore, rush to the conclusion that to-morrow Bohemians are in for a whaling at Bray, but football "form" is a most deceptive commodity, particularly when Bohemians are concerned.

Apparently the Bray team are beginning to find their feet, and, with Goughran a probable absentee from the Bohemians' front line, the visitors cannot take the result for granted, even should Bray's centre-forward, Donnelly, have to stand down through injury.

Of the five teams who won last week, Bray Unknowns, Shelbourne and Drumcondra have the advantage of playing at home. The latest newcomer to Shelbourne Park is the Ireland forward, Priestly, who makes his début with the team at inside-right, and, should he realise the expectations of the committee, the Rome forwards should provide the Brideville goalkeeper with plenty of work. This is the only match in Dublin to-day.

Waterford and Shamrock Rovers were beaten last week, and they meet to-morrow at Waterford. It should be one of the best matches of the season. Drumcondra are at home to Sligo Rovers, and should benefit thereby; but Dundalk will be hard set to score a victory over Dolphin at Dundalk.

SENIOR LEAGUE TIES

Pembroke Wanderers' Chance Against Rovers To-day

WITH Railway Union opposing the English Railways in London to-day, and their league tie with Trinity being postponed in consequence, the principal Senior League tie is that between Three Rock Rovers and Pembroke Wanderers at Londonbridge road. Rovers have a fast forward line, but their half-backs and defence may not prove as sound as those of Wanderers, who may win a close match.

Monkstown, on recent form, should get the better of Avoca School; while Corinthians seem likely to draw level with Trinity at the head of the league table with a victory over St. James's Gate. Dalkey and Naas should have a fine struggle at Stradbrook, with the odds in favour of the visitors; and Y.M.C.A. may just prove too good for Imperial Tobacco Company. Trinity are paying a visit to Limerick, where they will meet S.P.M.Y.A.

Financial News & Notes

DUBLIN BUSY

LAND BONDS LOWER

BANKING ISSUES ADVANCE

Markets opened quietly on the Dublin Stock Exchange yesterday morning, but as the day wore on business improved, and there was a very busy close. This was due to adjustments in connection with the present account. Firm conditions prevailed among local issues and British Industrials recorded a harder close.

The Second National Loan fell away to 116¾ and Land Bonds lost 6s. 3d. British Funds were in strong demand in the later dealings, and War Loan finished 7s. 6d. higher.

There was good buying of Banking descriptions. Bank of Ireland Stock gained a point, and Provincial Old jumped 2s. Munster and Leinsters and Nationals were several pence better.

Guinness Ord. improved to 146s. 9d., and elsewhere strong buying of Grand Canal Ord. resulted in a spurt of 7s. 6d.

Active and firm conditions prevailed among Rails, and Great Southern Ord. rose a point and Great Northern Deb. advanced two points. Other issues were mostly higher.

Dublin Tram Ord. and Alliance Gas Ord. held steady.

Johnston Mooney Ord., Goodbody Ord. and Ever Ready (Ireland) Ord. made headway, and Independent "B" Ord. recovered to a steady close after having been easier. Pye (Ireland) Ord. again changed hands at 2s. 6d. premium.

Tobaccos opened dull, but came in good buyers in the afternoon, and B.A.T. Ord. hardened to 132s. 6d., while Imperials advanced 1s. 9d.

Courtaulds Ord. shaded off, but Imperial Chemicals improved to 42s. 6d. The "other business done" section contained a long and varied list of securities.

LONDON CHEERFUL

GILT-EDGED STOCKS BETTER

Although operators in several departments displayed little inclination to enter into fresh commitments, slackness of business did not undermine the tone on the London Stock markets yesterday, and, in fact, the account finished in fairly cheerful fashion. Renewed firmness developed in Tin shares and many good improvements occurred in the Kaffir section.

BRITISH FUNDS.

Trading in Gilt-edged stocks was on a better scale than for some days, as operators paid less heed to the prospect of further corporation borrowing. Investment buying of several issues was witnessed and quotations responded well. The market closed on a firm note, with ¼ p.c. Consols showing to particular advantage.

RAILS.

British Rails as a whole were subdued, but the market was not without bright spots. The best feature was activity in London Transport "C," which jumped to 97½. Favourable attention was also directed to L.M.S. Ord and the stock moved up to 30. Among Colonials, Canadian Nationals strengthened, but Canadas eased off.

INDUSTRIALS.

The Industrial market showed no decided tendency, but prices generally were held up well and losses were usually due to selling based on individual factors. Transatlantics, after opening quietly, became active and firm, and Nickels again closed higher. Breweries moved irregularly and little of interest transpired in Motors. Tobaccos maintained a firm tone under the lead of Carreras, which were bought in anticipation of the dividend. Movements in Electrical, Building and Aircraft shares were mostly adverse, and disappointment with the dividends accounted for dullness in Tate and Lyle and the Unilever issues. Elsewhere I.C.I. made headway following the House of Lords' decision, and Crittalls registered another rise.

MINES.

The Mining groups attracted a fair amount of support and trading in Kaffirs was distinctly more active. West Wits were especially popular, while New Central Wits, Van Dyk, Venterspost, and many others were bought at rising prices. West African and other Gold issues moved narrowly and Copper shares weakened on profit-taking. Buying for new time was in progress in Tins, however, and Petaling and other leading issues reached higher levels. Diamond issues started off firmly, but selling in late dealings wiped out initial gains.

THE INDUSTRIAL MARKET

EASIER TREND

Dealers in the Industrial market yesterday were mainly engaged with carry-over preliminaries and business generally remained on a small scale. With a few exceptions prices were inclined to recede further owing to end-account realisations. Support was not entirely lacking and some modest gains were recorded in places.

The Transatlantic counters reflected the uncertain trend of Wall street and finished with a rather dull appearance in the late dealings. "Emmies" enjoyed a late improvement to 24s. on further consideration of the meeting.

Cable and Wireless stocks were easier.

IRON AND STEELS IRREGULAR.

Some irregularity was noticeable in the Iron and Steel section. Weardale Defd. further advanced to 43s. 9d., T. W. Wards received attention and recovered to 36s., and Tube Investments were 9d. up at 94s. 9d.

With only a few exceptions, Electrical Equipments remained on the dull side.

Aircrafts as a whole had a somewhat easier appearance, but a few firm spots were in evidence. Hawkers lost 1s. 6d. and Hawker-Siddeleys were again lower.

Motors and kindred issues made an easier showing, but few losses of note occurred. Raleighs were again an active market, changing hands up to 82s. on the increased profits and dividend, but reacting in later dealings to close 1s. down on balance at 80s. 6d., while Triplex Glass eased further to 74s. Austins gave way to 50s. on news of the strike.

RISE IN COATS.

In the Textile section J. and P. Coats came on for renewed support, and recovered 1s. to 52s. 10½d. Linen Thread also showed up well with a rise of 1s 1½d. to 34s. 3d., while Fine Spinners improved. Lancashire Cotton Debentures, however, receded to 81, while Bleachers also closed on the dull side.

Among Rayons, British Celanese fell further to 9s. 3d. American Celanese lost ⅛ to 5⅛, but there was a slightly better tone in the Canadian issue. Courtaulds were steady at 58s.

The Stores group made a bright showing. Woolworths rose to 157s. 6d., and Marks and Spencers to 44s.

UNILEVERS LOWER.

Unilever lost ground among Provision and Catering issues, the interim dividends not being up to expectations. The Ordinary and the N.V. were both 1s. lower at 41s. 3d. and 43s. 6d. respectively. Tate and Lyle continued on offer, and gave way 1s. 9d. further to 90s. 3d.

Breweries generally were subject to end-account profit-taking, though a few firm spots were still noticeable. Guinness showed no change.

Tobaccos received moderate support. "Bats," Carreras and "Imps" gained the turn, but Gallaher's remained on the dull side.

A dull tone was again apparent in the Miscellaneous section but movements as a rule were of small consequence. Turner and Newalls however, continued a bright spot on dividend anticipations.

OIL PRICES EASIER

Oil shares finished the week and the account in extremely quiet fashion, business yesterday being on as small scale as on Thursday. Sellers were more in evidence yesterday and there was an all-round decline in prices. As regards Continental business, operators in Amsterdam came in rather heavy sellers of Royal Dutch, and the fall which resulted had a depressing influence on other international counters. Preliminaries in connection with the carry-over revealed little change in the open position. Contangoes in Mexican Eagles were arranged with greater ease than for several accounts past.

RUBBERS FLAT

Interest in Rubber shares yesterday was small and extremely selective, and the bulk of dealings resulted from profit-taking sales. There was, however, no general desire to reduce commitments, and, although the market was on the dull side throughout the session, the majority of issues were maintained at their previous closing levels. Pataling went back rather sharply to 38s. 6d., but falls in other better class shares rarely exceeded 6d. Quiet but steady conditions characterised the commodity section and spot rubber was unchanged at 8¾d. per lb. United Kingdom rubber stocks are estimated to have fallen by 800 tons during the past week.

LONDON "STREET" MARKET

Business was again on a small scale in the American market in Shorter's court last evening, and the tone as a whole was dull. "Emmies," however, came into request on further consideration of the chairman's remarks at the meeting, and advanced from 22s. 10½d. to 24s., while there was also a good demand for American Woolworth, which finished a point to the good at 66½. Nickels gave way to 66, Steels to 78½, and Tractions to 18½. Canadas lost ¼ to 14⅞, as did Anacondas to 10⅞, while American Celanese, after changing hands around 5, were eventually quoted at 5⅛.

UNEMPLOYMENT IN FREE STATE

A FURTHER INCREASE

The official figures of the numbers on the unemployment registers in the Free State, issued yesterday, show a further increase.

The figures, including men, women, boys and girls, are:—9th November, 1936, 104,675; 2nd November, 1936, 97,425; 26th October, 1936, 71,743.

It is explained that the increase of 32,932 in the live register since 26th October is due almost entirely to the return to the register on the termination of the first and second employment periods, 1936, of the following classes of persons residing in rural areas:—(a) Occupiers of land on which the rateable valuation exceeds £4; (b) unmarried men without dependents, and widowers without dependents.

MEASURES AGAINST RUSSIA

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

BERLIN, Friday.

A warning that Germany will take "all necessary counter-measures" against Soviet Russia, following the arrest of seven Germans in Moscow, is given to-night in the Diplomatic Correspondence, the mouthpiece of the Wilhelmstrasse.

The Germans are reported from Warsaw to be among more than 100 persons arrested in the latest swoop of the Soviet Secret Police. Their detention led to an emphatic protest being made by the German Ambassador in Moscow, and has caused increased tension between the two countries.

The Nachtausgabe writes: "Moscow must not for a moment be in doubt that we regard these arrests as a provocation. Germany is not willing to allow her citizens to be treated abroad as outcasts."

MESSRS. SWITZER'S STAFF

ANNUAL DANCE

Messrs. Switzer's annual staff dance, which was held last night in the Metropole Ballroom, drew, as is usual, a very large attendance, both of those interested in the firm and their friends. Some of the latest fashions in evening wear were displayed, a particularly attractive frock, which was shown at its best by its graceful young wearer, was of white chiffon, made with a very full skirt, having a high waist-line and a loosely draped bodice, which was trimmed with silver crystals. Another attractive dress was of deep mulberry coloured moire, cut on Victorian lines and worn with flowers of a paler shade. Velvet, too, was popular, being generally seen in black or deep rich shades of red or green.

Among those in the ballroom were:—The Lord Mayor of Dublin, Mr. J. McQuiston, Mr. C. C. Avison (Director), Mrs. G. C. Avison, Mr. W. F. Hanna (Secretary), Miss M. Hanna, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. The Administration of Gilgit was taken over by the British political agent only two years ago by arrangement with the Maharajah, to whose Dominion the district belongs.

THE SMALL IRISH BREWER

CALL FOR TARIFFS AND QUOTAS

EFFECT OF WHEAT CAMPAIGN

UNSATISFACTORY conditions among the small Irish brewers, which had been aggravated by the Government Admixture of Home Grown Cereals Order, were referred to by Colonel T. A. E. Cairns, Chairman, at the ordinary general meeting of Messrs. Cairns, Ltd., brewers, Drogheda, which was held at the company's offices, Dame street, Dublin, last Thursday. Colonel Cairns mentioned that he considered the £1,000 additional expenditure on advertising money well spent.

The directors' report for the year ending August 31 stated that the profits, including interest on investments and transfer fees, amounted to £13,409. To that was added £5,983, carried forward from previous accounts, making a total of £20,392. After paying all expenses, there was left a balance of £11,483, out of which the directors proposed to pay a dividend for the half-year ended August 31 at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, less income tax, on £90,000 Preference shares, and 3 per cent. per annum, less income tax, on £84,880 Ordinary shares, leaving a balance of £7,417 to be carried forward.

The Chairman said that the lot of the small Irish brewer was none too happy. Brewing was one of the few unprotected and unsubsidised industries in the country. It was subject to tariffs on some of its essential requirements. The competition was too severe from at home and abroad, much of it from enormous concerns, whose overhead charges, per barrel, were much lower than in the case of the comparatively small firms depending merely upon an Irish trade. That competition fixed the prices which they could charge, in spite of variations in the price of commodities used in manufacture and in labour costs. They were subject also to Government action which, though, no doubt, improving the social aspect of the people, increased their costs. Steps had been taken, and were still being taken, to point out their difficulties to the authorities, and to ask for tariffs and quotas against foreign competition, but without much success as yet.

They were looking to the future, and believed that without judicious and courageous publicity they would never achieve the position for their ale which they believed it justly merited.

VALUE OF ADVERTISING

They were fully aware of the necessity for maintaining quality with advertising, and all steps had been taken to assure the highest quality possible. It must, however, be borne in mind that they were handicapped in their choice of materials, as the importing brewers had at their disposal the finest barleys in the world, while they, themselves, were restricted to home-grown grain irrespective of the badness of the season.

Continuing, Colonel Cairns said: "In past reports it has always been the good fortune of the Chairman to tell you that we have obtained all your requirements, and this year I regret I am unable to make that very satisfactory statement. Owing to the lower acreage under barley, especially in County Louth, because of the "grow more wheat" campaign, and increasing land under beet, also the badness of the season and consequent lower yield, accompanied by considerably poorer quality, the quantity of malting barley available this season has been much smaller than in past years. That situation has been aggravated very seriously by the Admixture of Home-Grown Cereals Order, whereby 33⅓ per cent. of Irish grain has to be mixed with maize meal. As a result it appears that millers have been buying over the heads of brewers and malsters and taking the best samples of malting barley for grinding. So far they had not been able to obtain their full requirements, though paying a very much higher price than that of last year."

BARLEY SITUATION

"I would remind you," said Colonel Cairns, "that we cannot raise the price of beer with a rise in the cost of material; consequently our profits for the coming year must be seriously affected by the abnormal barley situation. We approached the Minister for Agriculture to endeavour to get the Admixture Order put into abeyance until the beginning of the new year in order to give the brewer and maltster, the legitimate user of barley, time to obtain his requirements; but so far our representations, though received very courteously, have had no practical effect."

Mr. E. Davy congratulated the directors on the fact that they were paying a dividend of 3 per cent. He urged that when advertising they should stress the fact that theirs was a purely Irish concern and that all the money spent in connection with it went into the pockets of Irish people.

Colonel Cairns proposed, Mr. Wickham H. B. Moorhead (director) seconded, and it was passed, that the report be adopted.

The motion for the payment of the dividend as set out in the report was adopted, as was the proposition re-electing Messrs. Craig, Gardner and Company auditors for the coming year.

The other directors present were Mr. William R. Jordan, Mr. Henry Pollock, D.S.O.; Mr. P. J. Egan and Mr. A. E. W. C. Skilleter (general manager).

COMMEMORATION OF JOHN FIELD

DUBLIN PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY

It was disappointing to find such a sparse attendance in the Metropolitan Hall last night for the first of the Dublin Philharmonic Society's concerts of the season. It was hoped that the experiment of holding the concerts at night would prove popular, but, if one is to judge by the response last night, then one must fear for the success of the remainder of the series. Possibly the hall itself fails to attract concert-goers. It is a pity that the Society did not receive better support, as the programme for last night's concert was of wide interest. The outstanding item was the "Piano Concerto in A flat major," by John Field, the Irish composer, who was one of the most brilliant figures in the musical world in the early years of the nineteenth century, but is now only referred to in a casual manner, as the originator of the Nocturne form of piano composition, from which Chopin drew his inspiration for his musical poems. The solo pianist last night was Mr. Frank Mannheimer, who already had appeared in Dublin. His treatment of the work was extremely brilliant, not alone by reason of a technique which enabled him to bring out the ornamentation somewhat in the Mozartian style, but of his penetrating reading of the work. It was beautifully phrased and shaped, and he was in perfect accord with Dr. Larchet and the orchestra. Indeed, there was always a splendid understanding between soloist and orchestra, and even in the most delicate phrases of the dainty Adagio the balance was well-nigh perfect.

At the close of the work one felt a glow of satisfaction that, after all, Dublin had sent out into the international field of music in the person of John Field a figure of whom she had good reason to be proud.

Mr. Mannheimer also played a group of shorter piano pieces, notable among which were the "Berceuse" of Chopin, Debussy's "Hommage à Rameau," and Ravel's impetuous "Toccata." Again one delighted in the player's wonderful technique and understanding of the different subjects.

Of the orchestral pieces, Dr. Larchet gave his audience a very pleasing rendering of the Haydn "Symphony in D" (The Clock). He kept the rhythm going steadily, especially in the andante movement, from which the work takes its name. It was very interesting to see in the programme the Intermezzo, "The Walk to the Paradise Garden," from "A Village Romeo and Juliet," by Delius. Dr. Larchet's reading of the work was penetrating, and he drew a colourful picture of the tragic young lovers; though he was not always getting from his players just the effect he wanted—the wind, for instance, was not always too happy.

There was the same feeling of uncertainty with the wind instruments in the "Rosamunde" Overture of Schubert, and one was thankful for a safe, if not brilliant, performance. Ravel's restless "Bolero" concluded the programme.
